Wealthy Relatives Go From
New Jersey Church to Jail to Furnish Bond for Miss Bessie Morse.

"HIRED GUNMEN SHERIFF'S DEPUTIES"

Negro Maid in Home of Retired Farmer Alleged to Have Paid $1200 for Her Mistress.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.
NEW YORK, June 20.—As soon
as work services ended yesterday morning, the wealthy kinsmen of Miss Bessie Morse motored from Prospect Plains to the county jail at New Brunswick, N. J., and put up $7000 bail for her release.
They said they did not believe she had plotted with her Negro maid to have them killed on the lonely road near the family homestead
Saturday night, as Chief of Detectives
Ferd A. Toole and Prosecutor John E. Tolan charge she did.
The maid, Mamie Todd, a mulatto, who was taken from a Pennsylvania reform school when she was 13 and brought up as a servant
in the rambling old frame farmhouse where Miss Morse has lived all her life, and where her father and grandfather were born,
remained in a cell in the front yard of the red house, and down
the road a short distance the negro girl has been meeting at intervals
during the last few weeks two men
she thought were gunmen, but who really were deputies of Mr. David Morse, who lay the trap that was set for her.

niece, Miss Catherine Bellamy, how to drive, and with them were his children, Helen, Marie and Jacob.
When Miss Bellamy took control

Search Made for Driver Whose Car Killed Girl, 5, Saturday.

Twenty city detectives have been detail to canvas garages and other places in search of the roadster which was driven away after killing Dolores McDonnell, 5 years old,
of 5746 Etzel avenue, Saturday night.

into the street after a bouncing ball.

tomobile and escaped on foot after striking and injuring Frankie Lee James, 9, a Negro, of 1706A Biddle

A. Rhoads, 6033 Eitman avenue.

NEGRO PURSE SNATCHER
SHOT RESISTING ARREST

Nathaniel Knight, identified by Women, Is Held Prisoner
at Hospital.

While Patrolman John H. Wilson, off duty, was driving along Broadway near Fuller street in his automobile last night, he heard the screams of women and saw a fleeing Negro, at whom the women pointed. Wilson stopped his machine and ran after the Negro,
who picked up several large rocks
and hurled them at him. Wilson fired two shots over the Negro's
head and the Negro threw at him again. Wilson reported. The policeman then shot the Negro in the right chest, seriously wounding him.

The women, Mrs. Jean McGee, of 1226 South Ninth street and Mrs. Rena Johnson, of 1107 Lafayette avenue, said they were walking along Broadway, when the Negro grabbed Mrs. McGee's purse and ran. The Negro said he is Nathaniel Knight, of 2019 Chestnut street. In his pockets, the policeman reported, were found a watch and $22.50, which Mrs. Mc-Gee said had been taken from her purse. Knight is held a prisoner at City Hospital No. 2.

SLAYER SAYS MAN HE SHOT
ATTACKED HIM WITH RAZOR

Joseph Manley of 906 Rock road,
East St. Louis, died at St. Mary's Hospital early today of bullet wounds suffered Saturday night when he was shot by Edward Mc-Attee of 4018 Lincoln avenue.

McAttee, being held for the Coroner, told police that Manley several times had threatened to kill him,
and that when he met him Saturday evening, Manley started toward him with an open razor. McAttee said he fired twice in self-defense.
Manley, in statement at the hospital, said he did not know who shot him. He said a man came to his home, called him outside and fired at him.

The men's statements are being investigated by police, who said a razor was found in the ambulance
in which Manley rode to the hospicovering the distance in 6 hours 49 minutes.

Miss St. Louis, with George Knight driving, came in second, 13 minutes behind the winner.

The first two boats were in a close race until Miss St. Louis was stopped with some weeds in her propeller near Henry, but Knight gained 15 minutes in the last 30 miles. Miss New Orleans came in third, Miss Memphis fourth and Miss Peoria fifth.

All boats were delayed by a six-hour stopover in Marseilles, where a three-mile portage around the dam was necessary.

BYRD CONSIDERS START OF FLIGHT

land or water, ice forms on the propeller and the wings. The formation on the propeller is always lopsided, causing vibrations and when the lump gets big enough, it flies off, cutting holes in the propeller and injuring the occupants of the plane. Sleet always destroys the contour of the wings, reducing their lifting power.

"We know, however, that the sleet always forms within two degrees of each side of freezing and we will watch our little thermometer very closely. When we approach freezing we have the chance of going up or down 2000 or 3000 feet. Below that the plane will be warmer and above colder."

Byrd said the America probably would consume an average of 30 gallons of gasoline an hour and travel at an average speed of 83 miles an hour. The plane would be able to fly 4200 miles on the load of 1200 gallons of gasoline without considering the effect of adverse or helping winds. The hopful load of the 6000-pound plane will be 14,500 pounds, he explained.

Byrd's Purpose Is to Gather Data
Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—Although the forthcoming flight of Commander Byrd is private in the sense that it is not sponsored by the government, the Navy is taking a deep interest in the project.
Army men have taken considerable pride in that Col. Lindbergh was army trained and now the Navy has its chance.

Without in any way detracting
from the flights already made across the Atlantic, the Navy men here say the biggest problems in making transatlantic flights are certainly both from the surface, the national defense and commercial aviation, is to add to the sum total of knowledge of the subject of air navigation.

Commander Byrd is the most experienced air navigator the Navy has produced. His writings and considered authoritative. He was consulted by both Chamberlain and Lindbergh and has been freely of his data to all persons interested in transatlantic flying. His navigation made it possible for the flight
to the North Pole to be a success.
Commander Byrd has a three-motored plane and will be accompanied by skilled pilots. His object is to make a record in flying time but to be able to shift his course and test air currents on a long journey, so that he may be able to stimulate further experiments and flights by both Army and Navy.

Technically Commander Byrd is on the retired list but when he is not engaged in flying in a particular expedition he is on leave duty.
The general expectation is that he will fly to Paris, rest there just long enough to refuel and examine the motors and start back again
instantly along another air route,
thus making the first round trip
by air between the United States and Europe.

Byrd Bids Farewell to His Family
in Boston.

BOSTON, June 20.—Commander
Richard E. Byrd who came here today to receive an honorary degree from Tufts College, will return to New York late this afternoon prepared to set out on his attempted flight to France as soon as weather conditions permit. Mrs.
Byrd will accompany him to New York. Commander Byrd's home is in Boston and he returned to his family for a brief visit with his four children after the Tufts ceremonies.

John Drew's Condition Serious.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 20.—
Despite a slight rally last night,
John Drew, veteran actor, remaining in a critical condition today.
Drew is suffering from arthritis
and complications.

THREE MEN ARRESTED IN MUNITIONS PLOT

Truck and Trailer Loaded With Arms, Headed for Mexico,
Seized by U. S. Agents.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 20.— Another step has been taken in the frustration of what Federal agents think is an attempt to ship arms and ammunition from the United States to Mexico, with the arrest yesterday of three men on charges of conspiracy to violate the Federal neutrality act.

A truck and trailer loaded with rifles and shells, part of the evidence of the alleged conspiracy,
was seized en route from San Francisco to San Pedro, where it was to have been shipped southward on a fishing vessel.

John B. Mannersean, reputed president of the Pacific Arms Co.
of San Francisco, Guillermo Guller,
an attorney, and Ralph C. Sanders were arrested by city detectives and placed in jail.

"Mannersean is a big gunman,
from San Francisco," declared Lucien Wheeler, Deputy Chief of Justice chief investigation officer. "He is the president of the Pacific Arms Co., which sold the munitions, according to our information."

Mannersean gave his occupation
as an oil engineer and his residence
as a Los Angeles hotel.

The load of arms and ammunition, declared worth $50,000, is in San Pedro, under surveillance. It was seized 50 miles north of Santa Barbara and ordered continued to its destination under the guard of the Federal agents who captured it.

The truck and trailer proceeded to San Pedro, where it had been expected to be met by a fishing vessel for transport. The vessel had not appeared last yesterday, although it was declared to be in the harbor.

MISSING FARMER FOUND DROWNED IN HIS AUTOMOBILE

Receding Waters of Okav Disclose Him at Wheel of Car Near Venedy, Ill.

The body of Joseph Joergens, 47
years old, a farmer of Venedy, Ill., 18 miles east of Belleville, seated at the wheel of his submerged
Ford coupe, was found yesterday
by fishermen in a deep backwater
of the Okav River, near Venedy.

He had been missing since June 10, when he disappeared after leaving the home of a neighbor.
Fishermen noticed yesterday in the receding waters of the slough the top of an automobile protruding from the surface. They investigated and recovered Joergens' body.
Apparently Joergens had run off
the road into the slough.

A verdict of accidental drowning
was returned after investigation disclosed no indications of foul play.

MURDERER CHANGES PLEA
AND GETS LIFE SENTENCE

Slayer of Wife Admits Guilt As Trial Is Begun; She Had Refused to Return to Him.

Samuel Phillips, a Negro laborer, changed his mind after his trial for murder of his wife, Mattie, started in Circuit Judge Peary's court today, and changed his plea of "not guilty" to "guilty."
The judge sentenced him to life imprisonment.

Phillips, who is 59 years old,
and his wife had been driven from their home at 5100 North Short street, by high water in the Mississippi River. He met her on a companion avenue, between Adams street and Clark avenue on April 14 and asked her to return home with him, but she declined, whereupon he cut her throat with a razor.

Canon Boy Made Kills Him.

CHICAGO, June 20.—A mis-ture cannon, which he had made in a high-school foundry shop, exploded and killed Harry Eekeser, 23 years old, as he was about to fire it yesterday. The mouth of the cannon was smaller than the breach. When loaded, it burst, almost decapitating the youth.

Rector Says He Only Wants Church To "Consider" Trial Marriages

Explaining Address Before Episcopal Conference, He Declares Promiscuity Among College Girls Is Increasing.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 20.—
The Rev. Henry Lewis of Ann Arbor, Mich., says his recent speech before the national congress of the Protestant Episcopal Church has been widely misunderstood, that he never advocated trial marriages but only "dispassionate consideration and discussion of the findings of modern science and psychology in relation to morals."

What he actually told the congress was this: "If to sanctify the unmarried union would do away,
as some urge it would, with pro-miscuity and the double standard and better protect the children of legal marriages, then to keep fusling with rules about divorce and the idea that all marriages are made in heaven, is utterly folly. Why shouldn't the church take cognizance of sex and sex problems?"

"For Consideration of Church."
"Sex should be a beautiful part of life—there is nothing nasty about it. A love union between two people who feel that they care
for each other, which shall be recognized as a respectable, lawful union, but which may be dissolved
at any time, is what I give for the consideration of the church."

"It should last two years before being legalized and during these two years the pair should not have children—knowledge of birth control being made available. At the end of the period of trial, if they still love each other, let them marry and then have children."

"I have dealt with several thousand young college students at Ann Arbor. Their problems are moral —all moral—and while their aims are all right, they are badly confused by present conditions. Pro-miscuity among the girls is increasingly great. We must find a solution for it and be broad-minded in our efforts toward finding such a solution."

The Congress was also upset by suggestions by the Rev. Granville
M. Williams, rector of St. Paul's Church, Brooklyn, that the church would do well to consider a modified "Buchmanism" house parties
at which all the problems of youth, including sex and marriage, can be freely discussed. He emphasized that he thought this should supplement, not displace, regular service and would be invaluable in attracting the young to the faith.

Comment on Prelates.
Both views found widespread support as well as such denunciation.

Bishop Edward Lamp Parsons of California said:
"Mr. Lewis is a clear-thinking and devout priest. Loyal to the finest Christian ideals, he does not advocate a loose view of marriage or sex relations. He is merely pleading for dispassionate consideration of the so-called modern views on these matters."

Bishop John G. Murray of Maryland, while disavowing any share in Lewis' beliefs, declared there was no harm in expressing them
and that the matters he brought up would "have to be met squarely by the people of the church."

"Mr. Lewis offered us nothing immoral or revolutionary," commented Bishop William Faber of Montana. "He merely sought to awaken us to the necessity of seeking to understand the point of view of people with whom we differ in order that we may be certain that we are right in our views."

Mrs. Hart's. Both said that he announced he "was looking for trouble."

Police testified at the inquest that they had found no weapon on the wounded man and that Schulte had identified Mrs. Hart as his assailant. Testimony was presented to show that Mrs. Hart kept a revolver hidden under a mattress and that she got it when Schulte threatened her and her sister and made a move toward his hip pocket.

Miss Carrie Cook, Mrs. Hart's sister, testified that Schulte appeared at Mrs. Hart's house on June 12, intoxicated and refused to leave. Mrs. Blanche Ham, another sister who lives in the same block, testified that Schulte told her he had a weapon and was go-

ARMY FLYERS AT EL PASO, TEX.

Expect to Pilot Fokker Havillan Plane to Tucson, Ariz., Today.

By the Associated Press
EL PASO, Tex., June 20.—The Fokker three-motor monoplane, with Lieut. Lester J. Mallard and A. F. Hegenberger, in which the army hopes to span the Pacific Ocean between California and Hawaii, arrived here at 3:20 p. m.
yesterday. It had taken off from San Antonio at 2:50 a. m. It will leave today for Tucson, Ariz.

Upon arriving in San Diego the airmen will conduct tests of instruments by flying several hundred miles over water from San Diego before attempting the 2418-mile flight to Hawaii. The airmen expect to take off from San Francisco not later than July 15. The Fokker is a land plane, and in case of a forced landing the airmen will have only a small rubber boat for use.

Lindbergh Carries Cheer to 250 Maimed and Wounded Veterans In Hospital at the Barracks

In Addition to Smile and Handshake, Flyer
Presents to new "Comrades", 100-Pound Fruit Cake.

Col. Lindbergh, whose friends and admirers are legion, yesterday found 250 new "comrades."

While many good citizens of St.
Louis were at church yesterday morning, the ingenious young man who has won the hearts of the world, was at the United States

Veterans Hospital, south of Jefferson Barracks, performing one of his characteristic good works. An ambassador of good will he was abroad; a bearer of good cheer he was to the maimed and wounded
vets, the pallor of sickness on their cheeks, who crowded about him at the hospital and in a burst of gratitude made him one of them.

Never did he smile more warmly and infectiously than he did when the "boys" as one man voted to make him a "comrade."

Seemingly Embarrassed.
The countless number of hands
the young Colonel has shaken since he dropped down at the flying field outside of Paris a month ago increased by 250. For the Colonel, as far as one could ascertain, overlooked not a single veteran who had the strength to raise an arm or whisper a greeting, outside of those in the isolation wards.

He wasted no words of chatter
and at times seemed even a little embarrassed, but his unfeigned youthful charm won his "comrades" of the hospital over completely.

He arrived at the hospital shortly before 11 o'clock, accompanied by a small group of friends. And besides his cheering smile, his aura of heroic wisdom and world wide fame he brought with him a token of affection for the veterans—a huge 100-pound fruit cake. Charlie Walker, pastry chef of Hotel

Chase, had spent three weeks making the cake. It was presented at the Chase Saturday night. And the Colonel, overwhelmed with the honors and good things of life,
passed it on to his less fortunate
comrades crowded to the hospital.

There Before, Unknown.
The flyer was no stranger to the hospital. He had made several visits there before, then as an unknown young man pilot escorting home the fiancée of Pilot Bruce,
one of his flying buddies.

The girl, now Mrs. Gertrude Bruce, chief physiotherapy aid at the hospital, was at the door to meet him. Her husband's buddy, now the most famous young man
in the world and the most honored, greeted her with warm cordiality. Lindbergh had been a witness at her wedding at St. Charles,
last winter.

The hospital was astir with excitement long before the three automobiles carrying Col. Lindbergh and his party drew up. The hour of his arrival had been set for 8:30, but it was 10 o'clock before he got home from the St. Louis County home of his host, Harry H. Knight.

Met by Army Band.
In the meanwhile a heavy shower fell at the hospital and drove several hundred spectators waiting in knots about the grounds of the hospital, overlooking the Mississippi, for the arrival of the Colonel.
Officers, soldiers and their families from Jefferson Barracks moved over to the hospital grounds for a close view unimpeded by the vast crowd that greeted his public appearances elsewhere.

Maimed veterans in wheel chairs, convalescent veterans in the gray hospital garb, nurses in white uniforms, hospital physicians in white coats and blue uniforms and 200 civilians, many of them young women in gay Sunday dress.

At the entrance to the hospital grounds the Sixth Infantry Band
from Jefferson Barracks waited under uncertain skies to escort the Colonel up the driveway to the hospital entrance.

Bed-Ridden Join in Cheers.
Veterans straining from ward windows and grouped about the hospital entrance cheered when the automobile swung into view.
An escort of disabled men in wheel chairs joined the little cavalcade of automobiles, motor cycle police and the military band.

Lined up by Col.
H. W. Barker, medical officer in charge of the hospital, and Dr.
P. E. Johnson, his assistant.
Dressed in a blue serge suit, hat-
less, as usual, he climbed the steps of the hospital and immediately went to the administrative office,
while the word was passed around in the wards that the famous flyer had arrived.

Girls and women crowded to the door, clapping and shouting. At Col. Lindbergh's own request, the visit was speeded up.

"I'd like to stay longer," he told Col. Barker, "but I've got to get back to St. Louis. There will be a number of thousand people waiting in Forest Park."

Under guidance of Col. Barker and his staff, the Colonel passed quickly through a score of rooms, visiting and shaking hands with bed-ridden patients.

"Boys," Col. Barker would say,
"here is Col. Lindbergh."

A pale, drawn face would look up from a bed and a trembling hand would be extended.

Thus he came to the room of Charles Cummings, a blind veteran, who had a radio head set in place when the flyer entered.

"Colonel, this is a real pleasure,"
said the veteran. "I've been following you by radio ever since you hopped off from New York."

Another blind veteran he greeted was Lieut. Edward Voigt, whose bed was decorated in flowers for the event. And before leaving the separate rooms to meet the veterans gathered in the recreation hall in the basement of the building, he paid a visit to Miss Mary Mullen, Spanish war nurse, now bed-ridden.

Col. Lindbergh broke into one of his broadest smiles when he mounted the platform to face a crowd of 400 men and women, convalescent veterans and civilians, Mrs. M. E. Allen of St. Louis, whose son, Everett, was killed in the Shenandoah disaster, was called to the platform to occupy a position of honor beside the flyer. To the "boys" of the hospital she is known as "Mother Allen" for her services to them.

The ceremonies in the recreation hall were brief. Col. Barker proposed the boyish flyer as a "Comrade." And the "Comrades" assented with hearty "ayes" and vociferous applause.

Then the veterans, most of them
in rough hospital dress, filed by to grasp the Colonel's hand, a privilege shared with Kings and Presidents and the great. Towering above most of them, the Colonel bent from the waist in his familiar manner and occasionally smiled.
Some of the veterans came by carrying miniature copies of the Spirit of St. Louis, the product of their own craftsmanship.

Col. Lindbergh shook hands with about 150 veterans, standing at the platform of the recreation hall, and when the last man in the line had gone by him he made his way through the crowd to the door, stopping to grasp the hands of several veterans in wheel chairs.

The comments of the women in the crowd were audible above the hubbub. "Oh, isn't he lovely," exclaimed one enthusiastic admirer, crowding up to see him as he passed.

As he left he took with him a greeting from the hospital to his mother, extended by Mrs. Barker, wife of the hospital head. She told him all the women in the world enved his mother. The veterans, she said, were disappointed because his mother had not accompanied him.

Frustrated to shake the hands of Col. Barker and several of his staff once more, the illustrious young Colonel rode away to the accompaniment of roaring motor cycles and a final salvo of cheers from the crowd still congregated about the front of the hospital.

In the party accompanying him
to the hospital were Knight, Har-

Hall Anti-Dumping Order Refused.
By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, June 20.—Holding that the domestic steel industry was not likely to be injured by importation of steel rails from Germany, the Treasury announced today it had refused to issue an anti-dumping order against the importations for the Boston & Maine Railroad. Customs agents were unable to find evidence from any domestic company that dumping had taken place.

Woman Injured Leaving Theater.
As Mrs. Mary Sanders, of 1330
Merchant street, was walking out of the Gem Theater, at 16 South Sixth street, last night, she slipped on a banana peel and fell, her body striking the arm of a seat. She was taken to City Hospital, where she was said to have been internally injured.

When Is a Saving a Saving?

A year hence Uncle Sam will issue smaller bills of every denomination. They will be one-and-one-third inch shorter and three-fourths of an inch narrower, thus on paper and printing there will be a saving of $2,000,000 a year.

Secretary Mellon believes in saving money when the saving is real—but true economy depends on genuine value.

Value in relation to merchandise depends on fashion-rightness, supply and demand, and seasonability. Cost, former selling price or a merchant's estimate, cannot establish a standard. Hence we consider comparative prices to be misleading and refrain from using them in our advertising.

ENDOWMENT FUND GIFTS CANCELED BY YALE ALUMNI

Many Act in Protest Against Dismissal of E. M. Woolley, Undergraduate Dramatic Director.

HIS OUSTER LAID TO "POLITICS"

Upholders of Yale Tradition Oppose Turning of the University Into "Educational Factory."

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 20.—As a vigorous rebuke to the Yale Corporation for its action in dismissing Edgar M. Woolley, director of undergraduate dramatics, Yale alumni and undergraduates are canceling pledges to the university's $20,000,000 endowment fund, now nearing its campaign goal. Admitting that protests were being made in this manner, an officer of the university said yesterday that it was a "natural development" of a sharp difference of opinion over academic policy but that such cancellations were not important in extent. No estimate could be had of the number of pledges revoked or the total of money involved.

Students Cry "Politics." In a critical statement printed in the program of "Coriolanus," its commencement play, the Yale Dramatic Association charged Friday evening that the ouster of Woolley was due to "politics," and that its purpose was to "prevent the slightest interference" with Prof. George Pierce Baker's department of the drama. It also intimated the corporation had prudently temporized in "investigating Woolley until the endowment campaign was nearly completed."

A survey of the situation at Yale, which for decades has been free from internal controversy, reveals that Woolley's case is something more than a squabble over the forced departure of a popular campus figure. It involves a fundamental difference of opinion which has been developing slowly for many years and which has been emphasized since 1921, when Dr. James Rowland Angell became Yale's president.

The question is whether the traditional Yale, whose cultural background always has been Yale College, is to become—as some alumni put it—"a vast educational factory," a university similar to Columbia, whose graduates, professional and special schools completely overshadowed Columbia College.

More Dismissal Than Pride. The question is whether the traditional Yale, whose cultural background always has been Yale College, is to become—as some alumni put it—"a vast educational factory," a university similar to Columbia, whose graduates, professional and special schools completely overshadowed Columbia College.

The question is whether the traditional Yale, whose cultural background always has been Yale College, is to become—as some alumni put it—"a vast educational factory," a university similar to Columbia, whose graduates, professional and special schools completely overshadowed Columbia College.

There should be no conflict, they contend, between Woolley's field and that of Baker. The former has been producing classics with undergraduate actors. Woolley says his interest has been in encouraging cultural appreciation of the theater, in "turning out good audiences." Prof. Baker's students are concerned with the effort to produce Broadway plays. The broad distinction makes the action of the Yale corporation all the more puzzling to the undergraduates, especially since it has assured Woolley that his dismissal does not reflect either upon his character or competence and it was made necessary only by "general university relations."

DYNAMITE HITS LOS ANGELES

AQUEDUCT FOR FOURTH TIME

16-Foot Section of Concrete Lined Ditch Blown Out in Water Warfare.

By the Associated Press. LOS ANGELES, June 20.—Owens Valley, scene of a water war between ranchers and the city of Los Angeles, today echoed defiance at peace officers who sought to fix responsibility for another dynamiting apparently intended to damage the great aqueduct system upon which more than 1,000,000 persons depend for water.

The latest blasting occurred yesterday, when a charge of explosive, planted in spite of the watchfulness of many armed guards, blew out a 16-foot section of a concrete-lined ditch two miles south of Lone Pine.

The blast did not materially impair the operation of the aqueduct, officials reported. It was the fourth within a month in Owens Valley, where ranchers have sought reparations for land and water taken by the City of Los Angeles. The first outbreak was more than two years ago when armed ranchers opened the headgates in the Alabama foothills of the High Sierras, and for 65 hours prevented their closing, from which a torrent was released upon the desert.

Man Hit by Batted Ball Dies. By the Associated Press. JOPLIN, Mo., June 20.—Theo. Shafer, 25 years old, died last night as a result of being struck in the head by a batted baseball yesterday afternoon. Shafer, an outfielder for the Eagle Picher City League team, was hit by the ball in practice.

HER SIDE HURT LIKE TOOTHACHE

Lady Was Weak and Nervous After Spell of Illness, So She Took Cardui and "Improved Very Much."

"Some time ago I had a bad spell of illness, and after I got up I was so weak I could hardly get about," says Mrs. Etta M. Robertson, 1833 Broad Street, Augusta, Ga.

"My side hurt me dreadfully, and I had to hold it when I moved about the room. It ached like the toothache."

"I could not sleep at night, and was so nervous the least thing upset me. I worried a lot, for I did not think I would ever be well again. Nothing did me any good."

"One day I found a little book on my doorstep, and in it I read about women who had been benefited by taking Cardui. Some of them wrote of symptoms similar to mine, and I thought I would try Cardui myself."

"When my husband came home, I sent and got a bottle of Cardui and began to take it. Before I had taken all of that bottle I felt better and stronger. My side got lots better. I continued to take the medicine for a while, as I felt I was improving all the time. My side ceased to trouble me at all, and I was in better health than I had been in a long time."

"I can recommend Cardui to others, for I improved very much in health after I had taken it."

UNTERMYER ASSAILS GLASS' FINANCE BOOK

Accuses Virginian of Trying to Rob Owen of Federal Reserve Act Credit.

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, June 20. — The book, "Adventures in Constructive Finance," by United States Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, has been termed by Samuel Untermyer an attempt to take away from former United States Senator Robert L. Owen, of Oklahoma, the credit "to which he, more than any other man, is entitled" as the "true author" of the Federal Reserve Act.
Untermyer, in a 40-page pamphlet, made public yesterday, charges that the manifest purpose of the book was "to picture Senator Glass in the role of the sole author of that historic piece of legislation, and all others as at best assistants or supernumeraries."
To accomplish that purpose, he declares, Senator Glass saw fit "to assail bitterly the integrity" of Col. E. M. House, "to belittle and grossly misrepresent the work of the undersigned," to "minimize the important part played" by William Gibbs McAdoo, then Secretary of the Treasury, and "to ignore the influence" of William J. Bryan.
Untermyer said the Federal Reserve act was the direct outcome of the disclosures by the Puga Investigating Committee of the House of Representatives in 1912-13 "of the dangerous concentration of the control of money and credits." He added that this committee, of which he was counsel and investigator, "proved the existence of a vast money trust, which it was the design of the Federal Reserve act to destroy."
The main credit for the enactment of the Federal Reserve act, Untermyer said, belonged to Senator Owen. References of Senator Glass to the part Untermyer played in the preparation of the so-called Treasury Bureau bill or in efforts to have it substituted for the Federal Reserve act were characterized as "fiction, pure and simple, from beginning to end." Untermyer said he knew of no such bill until the appearance of Senator Glass' book.
Woman Killed When Autos Collide.

$100,000 ALIENATION SUIT

Beauty Specialist Reported Named By Woman Physician.

NEW YORK, June 20.—The New York World says that a summons has been served on Miss Ethel Michelsteter, beauty specialist, in a $100,000 suit brought by Dr. Mary Dunning Rose, charging alienations of the affections of her husband, Dr. Malcolm C. Rose.

The plaintiff is a former president of the New York Women's Medical Society and an officer of the Women's Democratic Club. She and her husband have continued to remain in professional partnership in joint offices despite their marital differences. The woman physician's complaint alleges her husband was discovered by private detectives in Miss Michelsteter's apartment.

AMERICAN INVESTMENTS

ABROAD, $13,000,000,000

This is Estimate of Dr. Max Winkler, Vice President of New York Banking Firm.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 20.—American Investments in foreign countries at the end of 1926 reached a total of approximately $13,000,000,000, exclusive of the political or war debt according to a report by Dr. Max Winkler, vice president of Bertron, Griscom & Co., bankers, published today by the information service of the Foreign Policy Association.

Dr. Winkler's figure is appreciably in excess of estimates which have hitherto been published in connection with foreign borrowings in this country because it includes not only new issues offered for public subscription, but also securities underwritten in this market and placed privately with American investors, direct American purchases of foreign property not involving the sale of foreign securities, the acquisition of foreign securities already outstanding and the purchase of foreign issues, both stocks and bonds.

"American funds were an important factor in the defeat of the Central Powers during the war and an equally important factor in their rehabilitation," Dr. Winkler said. "American money helped rebuild Japan after the disaster in the fall of 1923. America has loaned money to European and Latin-American countries for public improvements and for private, commercial and industrial developments."

SECRETARY DAVIS GIVES COMMISSION TO COL. LINDBERGH

Likens Flyer to St. Louis of France, the Crusader Whose Name the City Bears.

MANY SPEAKERS PRAISE HIS FEAT

Senator Hawes, Assistant Secretary of Navy Warner, Gov. Baker and Others Join in Acclaim.

Glowing tributes were paid to Col. Lindbergh at Art Hill, Forest Park, yesterday afternoon, by Secretary of War Davis, Senator Hawes, Gov. Baker, Mayor Miller, and former Mayor Kiel. Edward Hildner presided.

"Everyone in the world," said Gov. Baker, "now agrees with Emerson that America is but another word for opportunity, in view of this flight."

"It's a great thing 'Slim' has done for us and the world," said Senator Hawes. "We are here to see the man who did it first, who did it without mistake, and who did not hesitate when others hesitated."

"This young man has brought the name of St. Louis to the lips of every man, woman and child of the world," said former Mayor Kiel. "This American youth has taught the world how to conquer the air, and also has showed the way to behave in victory and glory. My boy, you are our own, and with you we lay claim to your mother God bless you, and may success be with you always."

Secretary Davis said: "Today, before this patron saint of St. Louis, we are gathered to do honor to the pride of St. Louis, Charles A. Lindbergh. King Louis IX, Saint Louis, tried in vain to conquer foreign peoples by force of arms; Lindbergh captured the whole world by his skill, by his gallantry—above all, by his modesty. The spirit of St. Louis, the crusader of old, was built on faith, chivalry and idealism; the spirit of St. Louis today, as typified by our crusader of the air, is building on the same firm foundation."

"It was a happy inspiration which named Lindbergh's plane the 'Spirit of St. Louis.' In its proud and soaring flight it well typifies the spirit of this fair city. And the pilot, tall above his fellows, may well suggest the city's patron saint before whose monument we stand, who was every inch a King. Louis IX of France was a lover of peace but a crusader; a charitable, but rigorously just, and, save for his mother, Blanche of Castile, he rode alone, ruling without favorites or Prime Minister. How fitting that a plane with such a name, piloted by such a youth, should fly from America to her ancient ally, France! Lindbergh worthily represents not only the spirit of St. Louis but the spirit of America; above all, the spirit of glorious, daring, all-conquering youth."

"Over 500 years ago the first man who crossed the Atlantic landed on the American shore. In the veins of the young pioneer to whom we pay honor today are strains of the same Viking blood which pulsed in the heart of that early Scandinavian explorer—Leif Erikson. That same strain of Scandinavian blood has served this country well throughout her history. And he was further blessed with a heritage of resolution, courage and fortitude from that modest woman who shares with him our affection—his mother."

Lindbergh rode alone. Erikson had companions. Lindbergh rode alone. It is that sublime isolation which more than anything else has captured the imagination of the world and lifted Lindbergh to a position of interest rarely paralleled in history. Man and motor in close communion conquered space and distance. And with characteristic modesty he gives full credit to his silent partner who bore him faithfully to his goal. 'We' it was who went through, not 'I.' David and his sling, Columbus and the Santa Maria, Nelson and the Renown, Commodore Perry, who, with similar thought, sent this historic message, 'We have met the enemy and they are ours'; Sheridan and his horse at Winchester, Dewey and the Olympia at Manila Bay, Pershing and our boys at Chateau-Thierry and the Argonne—these have worthy successors in Lindbergh and the 'Spirit of St. Louis.'

"If Lindbergh had a shipmate, it was science. In the universal acclaim which has acknowledged his superb courage and in the universal affection which his modesty has won, this remarkable efficiency has been sometimes overlooked. A man is not a homing pigeon, and when he can wing his way from continent to continent over the multitudinous seas that lie between, it is not luck, but science which leads him. It was not Lucky Lindy who won the victory but Lindbergh the worker, Lindbergh the student, Lindbergh the man."

"Lindbergh has given inspiration to the glorious youth of today. Romance is not dead in a commercialized world. The spirit of adventure still lives. Imagine his epochal deed, give an inspiration, skill, hard work, coupled with simplicity, modesty and, above all, scornful refusal to commercialize. Continued on Next Page.

The world's vest pocket is loaded with Lifetime pens, for each of which $8.75 has been paid. And the world buys judiciously. It pays good price for the best of its kind, and thereby practices true economy. It must have an unfailing pen. Therefore it buys the handsome jade-radite pen with the little white dot, the pioneer of beauty in penmanship. And so well is it made, as a matter of course, that it is guaranteed to perform faultlessly for a lifetime, with repairs free, if chance makes them necessary. The Titan pencil, with a mechanism sturdily simple, its barrel also of unbreakable Radite, shares in this world-wide success.

the world. As the poet has said: "How beautiful is youth; how bright its gleams With its illusions, aspirations, dreams— In its sublime audacity of faith 'Be thou reserved' it to the mountain saith, And with ambitious feet, secure and proud, Ascends the ladder leaning on the cloud."

"Col. Lindbergh, you have refreshed a world, weary of news of scandal and crime; you have made the aged to forget, for a while, the sad realities of life and to remember the glorious promises of youth; you have made youth realize anew that heroism is not a thing of the past but is part of everyday life. You have almost alone reunited, in spirit and soul, nations whose sons shed their blood in a common cause—peoples, who, through mutual misunderstandings, seemed to be drifting apart. When the world most needed a recrudescence of the valorous spirit of comradeship which sent men of different tongues and different races into the hell of battle with common purpose and common courage, you flew from the night as a harbinger of international good will. Heroism gains universal tribute. Undaunted courage breaks all international barriers. And, what is only less remarkable than your great deed, amid unparelled honors you have remained a modest, simple, unaffected gentleman—indeed, 'You have stood before kings and kept your head, my son.'"

"As representative of the Army of the Army which is proud that it gave you your early training, proud that you have so worthily lived up to its best traditions as an officer and a gentleman, I am happy to give you this commission as Colonel, Air Corps Reserve, on behalf of the Army of the United States. Col. Lindbergh, I am proud to salute you."

2 KILLED ON ROLLER COASTER

Youths Fall From Speeding Car in Aurora Park.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 20.—Falling from the front car of a roller coaster train hurtling down the last breath-taking dip of the roller coaster railroad at the Exposition Park near Aurora last night, two youths were crushed to death.

Several hundred merry-makers saw Lloyd Patterson, 14, and Gerald Erickson, 17, both of Aurora, lose their lives. Some young women who were passengers averted their eyes.

INJUNCTION AGAINST NEW CHURCH DENIED

Judge Hartman Refuses to Restrict Compton Heights Congregation From Building.

An injunction to restrain the Compton Heights Christian Church from erecting a church building at the southwest corner of Grand boulevard and Flora place, was denied today by Circuit Judge Hartman. Residents and property owners of the place had testified, in a hearing of their suit two weeks ago, that erection of the church in Flora place would violate an agreement made in 1897 providing that the district, from Grand to Tower Grove avenue, be for residence purposes only.

The church bought the ground on which it plans to build two years ago from Henry Nicolaus, formerly a resident of the place. Judge Hartman, in his opinion said because of the rapid changing of the Grand boulevard district in the vicinity of Flora place, the desirability of the place along Grand as an exclusive residence section is gone. Judge Hartman found also that two of the lots the church bought, were not submitted to the agreement restricting the place.

It is expected that, unless further legal complications develop, the church will be built immediately. A $250,000 building, facing on Grand, is planned.

POPE CREATES TWO CARDINALS

Archbishop Van Rocy, Who Succeeded Mercier, Elevated.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ROME, June 20.—Mgr. Van Rocy, who succeeded the late Cardinal Mercier, Belgium's priest-hero of the World War, as Archbishop of Malines, was created a Cardinal by Pope Pius at a secretary consistory this morning.

Mgr. Hlonda, Archbishop of Posen (Poland), also was raised to the Cardinalate and the pontiff confirmed the appointment of several new Archbishops and Bishops.

By the Associated Press.

WARSAW, June 20.—The newly named Cardinal Hlonda is the apostolic administrator of Polish Upper Silesia and is one of the most brilliant members of the Catholic Church in Poland. He devoted himself to the problem of educating children and is a scholar of wide learning.

Born in 1881 the son of a minor railway official, Hlonda joined the Salesian order and entered a monastery in Italy at the age of 13 years. He became a doctor of philosophy and also studied music. Returning to Poland, he completed his studies at the universities of Krakow and Lwow. After holding important posts in the church in 1926 the new Cardinal succeeded to the archbishopric of Posen and Gnesno.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—More than 2000 Washington citizens have organized to wage war against bootleggers. Formed under the name of the City Service Association for Law and Order, a mass meeting last night launched a movement for the private citizens to obtain liquor evidence for the authorities. The Rev. William S. Abernethy, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, and the association's president, urged every member of the organization "to get hold of every bit of evidence they can lay hands on."

The association does not propose, he said, "to enter private homes or search hip pockets for liquor. Our enemies can call us cellar snoopers or any other name they choose, but we won't care," the Rev. Mr. Abernethy declared.

SUIT FILED TO FORCE ST. LOUIS TO MAKE LEVY FOR LIBRARY

Mandamus Action in Missouri Supreme Court Also Would Affect Tax for Zoo.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON, CITY, June 20.—The first legal move to block the Miller administration attempt to seize control of the finances of the St. Louis Public Library and the Zoo was made today, in the filing of a mandamus suit in Supreme Court by the Board of Directors of the Public Library, to compel the city to make the library levy for four cents on the $100 assessed valuation.

The petition does not mention the two-cent levy for the Zoo, but the decision by the court on the library levy will settle the similar questions involved in the controversy over the Zoo tax. As has been told the Board of Estimate and Apportionment withheld the special levies for the Library and Zoo, and third levy of two cents on the $100 assessed valuation for the Art Museum on the ground these levies were unconstitutional. The Board of Aldermen passed the 1927 rate ordinance omitting the special levies.

The City Counselor later ruled the Art Museum levy must be made, pointing out that the State Supreme Court had upheld the constitutionality of the levy in 1912 when a similar attempt was made at the city hall to discontinue it.

MAN KILLED BY TRAIN; HAD MARINE CORPS DISCHARGE

A man who had in his pocket a discharge from the Marine Corps issued to Lloyd Dudley Fickett was killed by a southbound train on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy tracks near 6100 North Broadway about 7:30 o'clock this morning.

The man wore blue overalls and a pair of high laced boots. He was about 32 years old and weighed about 185 pounds. Two names and addresses were found in his pocket—Val Johnson, Box 172, Carleton, Minn., and Mrs. A. S. Thomason, Box 224, Carleton, Minn. Above the latter name, which was on a crumpled piece of paper, was written the word "mother."

BABY BORN AS TRAIN BURNS

300 Passengers Escape in Fire at Chicago Suburb.

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, June 20.—One life was gained in a train accident last night on the Chicago, Aurora & Elgin Electric Road.

The four-car train caught fire at Maywood, a suburb, and while 300 passengers broke through windows and doors and escaped injury, a child was born to a passenger. It was rushed with the mother to a hospital after a physician aboard the train had rendered first aid.

MOVIE OPERATOR FLOGGED

Four Men Kidnap Florida Resident in Auto, Driving to Woods.

By the Associated Press.
TAMPA, Fla., June 20.—William E. Sullivan, motion picture machine operator, was seized on the streets here last night by four men, dragged into a waiting automobile and taken several miles into the woods and severely whipped.

He was left in the woods, but returned to his home at 2:30 o'clock this morning. He declared he did not recognize any of his assailants. Investigation of the flogging will be pushed to the limit, police said.

GUARD U. S. ENVOY TO CHILE

By the Associated Press.

SANTIAGO, Chile, June 20.—The Chilean Government has established a special guard day and night at the American Embassy as a result of receipt of a letter by American Ambassador William M. ### GERMAN DAY SPEAKERS

PAY TRIBUTE TO LINDBERGH

"Deserves All Honors As Hero of Peace," Says Dr. Ahrens, Consul at St. Louis.

An echo of the great gathering on Art Hill in Forest Park yesterday afternoon was the annual German day picnic at Triangle Park, at which Col. Lindbergh was called "the hero of peace."

Most of those at the picnic attended the Forest Park meeting first and speaking did not get under way until 6:30 p. m.

"Lindbergh deserves all the honors bestowed upon him for he is the hero of peace," declared Dr. George Ahrens, German Consul for St. Louis.

Mayor Miller predicted something would "happen in the history of the Municipal bridge in which you will all be interested," and that "work on the Southern approach would start in 45 days."

...the Keynote of America's Progress has Created a Demand for The Eden Speedwasher

SCIENCE now steps into the household laundry for its latest triumph—steps in and cuts hours from the weekly task of cleansing soiled linen. The Eden Speedwasher, last word in the science of washing clothes carefully, in a minimum of time and without hand labor, is ready for St. Louisans today!

Eden's fifteen years of building a reputation so well known to more than 35,000 St. Louis Eden owners, is summed up in the Eden Speedwasher, the answer to the demand for a washer that works both gently and QUICKLY!

The new Eden Speedwasher is a companion to the cylinder type Eden, long and favorably known as St. Louis' favored washer, and now the Eden name sponsors the two types of washers that are accepted as standard today. The Eden cylinder type—careful and dependable; the Eden Speedwasher—careful, dependable, and also QUICK!

We invite St. Louisans to try the Eden Speedwasher and see how this finished product combines speed with washing efficiency. It is ready to quietly go on duty in St. Louis homes as the permanent, trouble-free solution to the laundry problem.

Without further introduction, the Eden Speedwasher is ready for work. As a special introductory program, this latest and marvelously fast-working Eden will be placed in a limited number of homes on Free Trial.

We want you to experience the thrill of seeing your soiled linens go into its spacious copper tub and come out spotlessly clean, almost incredibly soon.

We want you to prove that its "balloon" wringer rolls leave buttons alone. We want you to see how simple, safe and satisfactory it is to operate.

Try an Eden Speedwasher next wash-day at our expense. Without being importuned to buy. See how it assumes the whole burden of washing and wringing with no effort at all on your part and, should you wish to purchase, its considerably lower price and convenient terms will please you.

Because of the widespread interest that this announcement will create, the Eden stores will maintain washing demonstrations daily during business hours. Home demonstrations, in daytime or evening, will be cheerfully arranged in rotation upon receipt of a telephone call by any of the stores listed below.

FAIRMOUNT RACETRACK.

June 20.—Twinkling, 3-year-old daughter of Fair Play, outran

a good field of 3-year-olds in the sixfurlong feature here this afternoon.

The St. Clair Country Club Purse,

Purple Pirate, son of Man o' War,

and Beggar Boy, full brother to Black Gold, were relegated to the background, the former finishing

out of the money and the latter lasting to hold third place. Shasta

Bullet ran a strong race, passing up Beggar Boy near the finish and gaining on the leader at every stride. The margin of victory was about two lengths.

Purple Pirate's race was steady,

but he failed to get anywhere.

Twinkling was prominent from the start, battling with Beggar Boy for most of the race.

Candy Star Wins Sixth.

The sixth was a walk-away for

Candy Star, who ran a sparkling race, just two-fifths of a second

out of the track record for the mile

held by herself and Edward Gray.

The latter finished badly out of the money. Ruane, coupled with Jack

Horan as the Mehan entry, was second and closed the gap to a length and a half at the wire.

Mallard's Memory slowed up a bit and took the race to the end.

The winner's win price was only 12.

H. G. Bedwell's Foretell proved to be in the "right spot" in the opener race and ran away from a big field to win by about four lengths. Spait ran a good race and finished second, and Lamp-

ward came with a good rush to come in third. Bonny Castle raced close to Foretell until the end,

when he tired.

Foretell paid $15.40 for a 22

ticket. Lampward's show price was $14.80.

A Long Place Price.

H. Merit gave Greta a good ride

to win the second race, hanging

close to the rail, while the leaders

lost ground by going wide on the last turn. Alma was one of those which suffered but finished second and paid a place price of $37.40.

Lady Welcome was third. The win-

TILDEN WINS OPENING MATCH AT WIMBLEDON

La Coste, Cochet, Brugnon and Kozeluh Advance Safely; Harada, Japanese Star Defeated by Landry.

By the Associated Press.

WIMBLEDON, England, June

20.—The Wimbledon Lawn Tennis championships were off to a glorious start today. Sixty matches were played in the men's singles,

the entire first round being run off under the most favorable

weather conditions.

The only surprise of the day

came when Takeichi Harada of Japan, considered one of the first five ranking players in the world and "seeded" in this tournament,

went down to defeat before Pierre

Landry, one of France's newcomers.

William T. Tilden, the American

star; Rene LaCoste, Henri Cochet,

Jacques Brugnon and Karl Kozel-

uh advanced safely, while Jean

Borotra and Louis Raymond, the two remaining seeded players, still were engaged in fighting out their matches as the sun was going down.

LaCoste and Tilden, favorites to reach the final, were not called upon to show their best wares today as their opponents were not of first rank and both won in straight sets.

Francis T. Hunter, who recently made a tour of Europe with Tilden, meeting the best players of all countries, defeated Y. Ohta of Japan. Watson M. Washburn,

the only other American entered in the men's singles, was eliminated by Hans Timmer of Holland.

"WE," AT ART HILL, GIVE HUGE THROG GREAT THRILL

IN THE "SPIRIT OF ST. LOUIS" LINDBERGH FLIES OVER PARK, RETURNING LATER TO SPEAK

Greeted by 100,000 People as Speakers Praise Him and War Secretary Hands Him Reserve Colonel's Commission.

By FREDERICK H. BRENNAN.

Charles Lindbergh stood before 100,000 persons on Art Hill in Forest Park yesterday afternoon and amidst a silence more eloquent than the cheers of millions, dedicated the statue of Saint Louis. The city's official welcome was given in the most fitting manner. Three days of small and parade, of respect and of the young adventurer how St. Louisans respond to the spirit of the city. If London had its tumult, if Washington had its gala, if New York had its thrills, it was the spirit of St. Louis, Lindbergh's home city had greeted him at the end of the triumphant flight with a reward peculiarly its own, a tribute of affectionate tears.

Fittingly, he was led to Forest Park for the flight moments, the most impressive spectacle of his reception here. There gathered in the afternoon a multitude which nearly filled the huge amphitheater on Art Hill, the like of which has not been seen since the Festival of the Exposition of 1904. Again, the evening, thousands assembled in another place of beauty in the park—the Municipal Theater—to speak their praise and end a month of adulations.

Forest Park, despite its untold millions of thousands, must have seemed a peaceful place to Lindbergh, after the Elvies, Piccadilly, Pennsylvania avenue, Broadway and the famous din of carnival streets. When the time came for silence a perfect spell was cast upon the throngs.

So it happened that Lindbergh stood on Art Hill in the shadow of the statue of St. Louis, with the sun shining brightly about, and had a multitude at last. Far below below the lagoon was the gaudy speakers' stand forgotten. The hill seemed to have gathered in its coolness, and all that sweating, jostling mass of humanity, for a moment of time ceased to toss, faces blended in a common hush, and the good King upon his black charger gave benediction with uplifted sword.

They heard the tall, straight, boy a lovely wreath. His face glowed, he mounted a platform and waved the wreath against the base of the statue. Sun rays leaping the sky stone parapet of the Art Museum, thrashed their mark and faded to the dark solemnity of the scene. It held the 100,000 until Lindbergh raised a hand as in salute and turned away.

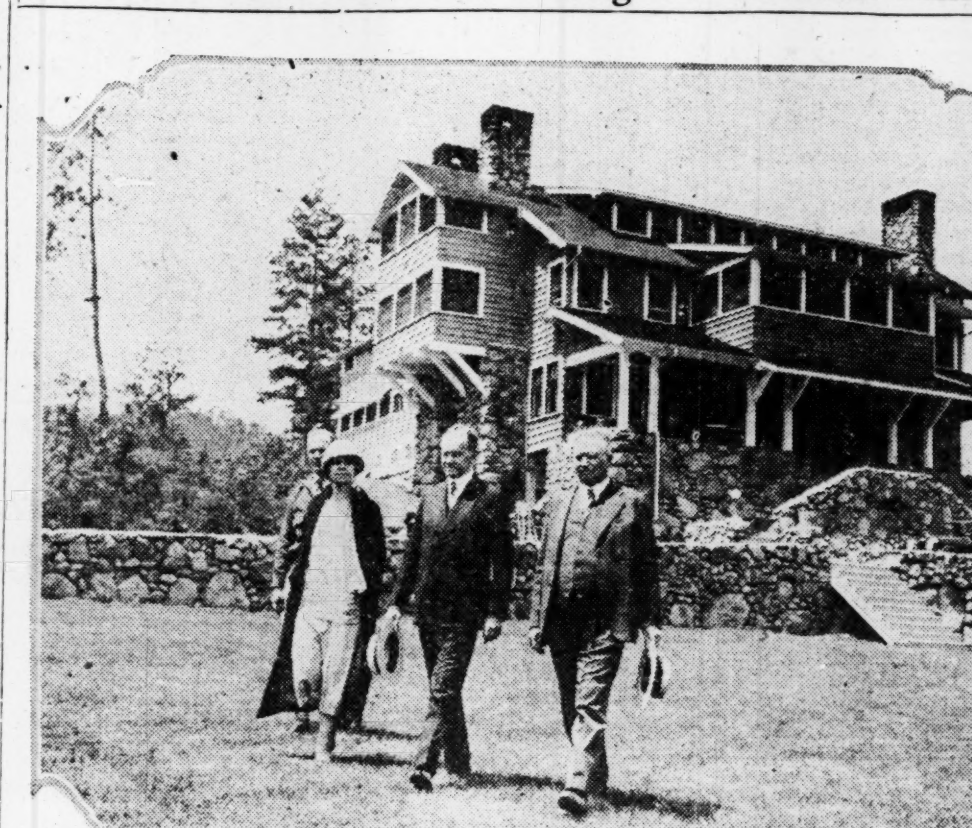

Amazing Journey at End. The city of St. Louis, State and nation, in the group around the statue reflected in their faces what most of the crowd, in its diverse ways, felt. A youth had come back from high enterprise—adventure as the King Louis saw on the great crusade. His amazing journey so far as any in the crowd could see was at an end. There might be other journeys, other omissions, but this one had reached completion before St. Louis in Forest Park.

As the hero of the world faced the watchers below, he was part of the silence. His young eyes were humble, reverent, humility, reverence. A salute at the wondrous journey's end to the cold memorial of a worthy life lived centuries ago. Adults caught the splendor of the moment and were moved by it as a crowd is stirred.

There had been oratory. Several thousand words had been added to the millions spoken and written about Lindbergh since he had crossed the Atlantic. There had been the approval of Presidents, the approval of the world's press, the approval of the crowd's delight, yesterday. Speakers had marched and policemen had lined up, and Lindbergh had ridden the sky, reception committees had swarmed, but this one had reached completion before St. Louis in Forest Park.

The President and Mrs. Coolidge in the Black Hills

By the Associated Press. RAPID CITY, N. D., June 20.—President Coolidge entered into his second week in the Black Hills, convinced that the summer White House is an area exactly to his liking.

He has fished successfully in its mountain streams, known the romance of its pine-covered hills, the thrill that an easterner receives from being dressed in a 10-gallon hat and he has heard from a 20-year-old boy a simple statement as to why people should go to church.

Perhaps more than any other, the President's first Sunday in the Black Hills was an experience he long will remember, but the day was hardly less unusual for himself than it was for Roy Lium, the big blond youth who preached the first sermon of his life yesterday, before the President of the United States.

The youth stood behind the pulpit of the Hermosa Congregational Church and looked out upon a gathering as typical of this western country as was the little building set up on the prairies for simple living folks who worship in a simple way. The day was one which probably never will be forgotten in that town of several hundred people.

Photographer and Tourists Attend. The word had been sent out from the summer White House several days ago that the President and Mrs. Coolidge would attend the Hermosa Church and a large gathering of photographers, tourists and local townpeople was on hand. The smell of pine was in the air and great flocks of drifting clouds tempered an otherwise hot sun.

Inside, the church was spotless. Glass fish bowls held the golden rose of the prairies. Lium, who came to Hermosa a few days ago to earn enough money as a preacher to put him through a senior in Carleton College in Minnesota next year, was calm as a veteran, and he felt any misgivings he shielded them under a sunny countenance.

He led the hymns and preached without hesitation from notes, while the President and Mrs. Coolidge listened attentively and after the last time he went out after trout. It was all over, he received the congratulations of his distinguished guests and posed with them repeatedly for pictures.

Mrs. Coolidge joined in the singing of all the hymns, but the President remained silent. There was a hush when the singing began, but soon a rancher's wife, encouraged by Mrs. Coolidge's singing, picked up the song in a deep alto, and the others soon followed.

While the collection plates were being passed a young woman played at the upright piano. Mr. Coolidge dropped a $5 bill into the plate and as it went along the aisle where the rest of his party was sitting, its metal responded to the clinking of silver dollars.

President and Mrs. Coolidge expect to attend the church every Sunday and the young preacher acknowledged that the prospect "is an awful strain." He had spent several long nights pondering yesterday's message, and the thought of keeping up the record of a good beginning plainly gave him some anxiety.

After church, which the President attended in a high silk hat, Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge returned to the State Game Lodge for luncheon and spent the rest of the day on the spacious front porch of their mountain residence.

Clad in a miniature cowboy hat, boots, sport shirt and slicker, Mrs. Coolidge set out for a trout stream near the Summer White House today to try her luck with a fishing pole.

Several hours later Mrs. Coolidge came back, happily displaying a good sized speckled trout. A favorable report on conditions in the Northeast was brought to President Coolidge today by Herbert Hallenberg, an examiner for the Federal Reserve Bank at Minneapolis. With abundant spring rain, crops are looking fine, Halberg said, and the people in the section are feeling optimistic. Mr. Coolidge motored to the executive offices in Rapid City to spend a few hours at his desk. Shortly after he left the Summer White House rain began to fall but traveling the 22 miles to his office over good gravel roads, he had no trouble reaching Rapid City.

SIX CHILDREN OF JAVANESE PRINCE MARRIED AT ONCE

Weddings of Son and Five Daughters of Noble House Scene of Oriental Splendor.

SURAKARTA, Java, June 20.—Five princesses and one prince—all children of the Susehunan of Surakarta, an immensely wealthy Javanese prince of ancient lineage, were married today at a joint ceremony with Mohammedan rites before an intimate court circle.

The princesses were wedded to members of the Susehunan's house and the prince married the daughter of a neighboring potentate.

The famous Javanese wedding dances in colorful costumes, glittering with jewels, to the music of native instruments, exceeded anything hitherto seen in the island of Java.

The Susehunan, who maintains a show of local power under Dutch sovereignty recently suffered a painful bereavement—his favorite cat died. Laid in a costly casket, the cat was taken to the burial place by 24 elaborately accoutered warriors, followed by mounted lancers.

Court Explains Why Youth Was Given Life Term for Killing Soviet Diplomat.

By the Associated Press. WARSAW, June 20.—Explaining the grounds on which Boris Kovceda, young Russian student, was sentenced to life imprisonment for the assassination of Peter Volkoff, Russian envoy to Poland, the special tribunal which tried him, declared the death penalty was only proper when a crime threatened to become epidemic; that Kovceda's crime did not give rise to such fears, and therefore life imprisonment was sufficient. It was pointed out that, according to his own declaration, Kovceda was "avenging Russia's millions of victims."

In connection with the court's recommendation that the sentence be commuted to 15 years' imprisonment, the tribunal said there were extenuating circumstances. Volkoff was shot by Kovceda at a railway station in Warsaw June 7. There was indignation when it became known that the student was not sentenced to death.

A detachment of Japanese sailors was landed from warships in the Yangtze and in dispersing the looters opened fire with machine guns. Japanese advisers at the time said that two Chinese were wounded.

SPANISH VICTORY IN MOROCCO Troops Capture Djebel Alam, Site of Arab Shrine. Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and the Chicago Daily News. Copyright, 1927.

MADRID, June 20.—A brilliant feat of Spanish arms, which greatly furthers pacification in Morocco, has been accomplished by the capture of Djebel Alam, near Chauen. Columns starting from four points of the compass converged on the mountain top, where stands the shrine of the most venerated Arab saint of Northwest Africa, Chorfa.

Strict orders were given that the shrine be spared bombardment by airplanes and artillery, and when it was captured, only Mohammedan troops were allowed to approach, so as to demonstrate respect for the Moorish religion. The Moore resisted bravely, but were obliged to flee, leaving many dead and wounded. The total casualties are estimated at 800. By continued advances, the last rebel areas are being rapidly cleared and the prestige of Spain is being raised.

WRECKAGE OF AIRPLANE REPORTED OFF THE AMAZON Inquiry Into Fate of French Aviators St. Roman and Mouneyres Reviewed by News.

RIO JANEIRO, June 20.—Inquiry into the fate of Capt. Saint Roman, French aviator, and his companion, Mouneyres, missing since they left St. Louis, Senegal, May 5, in a plane bound for Pernambuco, Brazil, and have since disappeared, was revived here today by news that the wreckage of an airplane had been found near the mouth of the Amazon River by a fisherman.

The news is contained in a telegram from Para signed by the chief of the National Telegraph district. It said that a deep sea fisherman reported he had found a raft made of an airplane wing attached to which were two wheels. On the wheels were the marks "Five aero 800x160 12.12 26."

ARTISTS SAIL CHINESE JUNK IN SEARCH FOR COLOR DEAD MAN'S POINT, N. C. June 20.—An American woman artist is "Admiral" of a Chinese junk which has come to anchor in the Atlantic near here. The ship is the Amoy, named after the "City of the Open Moon," where it was built. The "Admiral" had her crew picked up the song in a deep alto, and the others soon followed.

While the collection plates were being passed a young woman played at the upright piano. Mr. Coolidge dropped a $5 bill into the plate and as it went along the aisle where the rest of his party was sitting, its metal responded to the clinking of silver dollars.

President and Mrs. Coolidge expect to attend the church every Sunday and the young preacher acknowledged that the prospect "is an awful strain." He had spent several long nights pondering yesterday's message, and the thought of keeping up the record of a good beginning plainly gave him some anxiety.

After church, which the President attended in a high silk hat, Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge returned to the State Game Lodge for luncheon and spent the rest of the day on the spacious front porch of their mountain residence.

tion, and then return for the speechmaking.

When the monoplane came in sight above a cove of shrubbery on the western side of Art Hill, the crowd awakened to vast enthusiasm. It had been waiting in the sun for two hours, but here was Lindbergh in the air. As he drew near a squadron of 21 pursuit planes from Selfridge Field, Michigan, which had been quartered at Scott Field during the Lindbergh welcome here, flashed across the horizon to the eastward. Lindbergh and the army planes, in terrifying thunder, swooped downward to the scene.

Lindbergh Flies Low. Up there before the eyes of a hundred thousand earth-bound mortals were the most famous ship and pilot aviation's history has known. As Lindbergh, flying low with one wing down, swept across the foot of the hill, he gave them what they sought. It was a sight to remember. Roaring overhead like a silver projectile, flew the finest achievement of what history can describe as "America's mechanistic age." A monoplane, which functioned perfectly for 33½ hours, at a speed of more than 100 miles an hour, when a few splutters of its engine would have plunged it and all it carried into a nameless grave. There was the epitome of a thousand factories belching smoke, a million men tinkering with the structure of a dream.

"Yay, yay, yay," yelled the hundred thousand. The pursuit squadron, traveling at 150 miles an hour plunged in a long ribbon of sound and motion, wing to wing and tail on nose. The "Spirit of St. Louis," darted upward, aspiring to the white clouds that drifted across the sun.

"Hurrah for Lindy!" yelled the crowd. Three times he raced above the waving, cheering thousands, and once he waved a hand to them. The crowd was seeing another marvel: perfect co-ordination of man and his machine. If the monoplane's whirlwind engine had been stout enough to buffet sleet and wind above the Atlantic; the heart of the boy who drove it had been as strong. His nerves were as steady as its propeller beat; his eye as keen as its quivering instruments. What that signified in matters of morals and spiritual quality, clergymen have been expounding. Of course, of one hundred thousand are crude theologians; but had one studied the throng on Art Hill closely enough he might have seen that many had found another thing to remember.

Lindbergh in His Element. For five minutes Lindbergh lived in his element for gratification of his admirers. Orators had compared him to Christopher Columbus, Sir Walter Raleigh and Gen. Pershing, but the fever of oratory was flickering out. Lindbergh's flight above the hundred thousand, yesterday, said all too plainly, "I'm just the best aviator in the world, and that's enough."

When excitement was at its height the hero without a flourish slipped behind the near horizon again, and presently an announcer bawled: "Col. Lindbergh has landed at the field and will presently return to address you in person."

Meanwhile, on the platform, Edward Hadden, chairman of the day; Gov. Baker, Senator Hawes, Secretary of the day, and a host of other officials, were looking on.

Land of No-Saturday-Night FOUND BY FIELD EXPEDITION Madagascar Head-Hunters Never Bathe, "Wash" Clothing in Grease, Have Wooden Pillows.

CHICAGO, June 20.—Strange Madagascar tribesmen, some of whom never bathe or wash their clothing, who sleep on carved wooden pillows and live largely on a diet of sour milk have been found by Dr. Ralph Linton, leader of the Capt. Marshall Field Expedition to Madagascar for the Field Museum.

These Andanoro and Mahafaly tribesmen, Dr. Linton, found, follow a curious custom of soaking their clothing in grease. He discussed their strange characteristics in a report made public today by the museum.

Head hunting is practiced, the heads of enemies being taken as trophies and suspended from a rack outside the villages. Dr. Linton expressed amazement at the number and viciousness of crocodiles in the region.

"They are so bad," he wrote, "that the women always get their water with a dipper on a 10-foot pole."

EUROPE RAZING TARIFF WALLS U. S. Delegate to Geneva Conference Says Need Is Gone. By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 20.—The tariff walls of Europe are crumbling, John O'Leary, former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce and American delegate to the recent economic conference in Geneva, told the American Chamber of Commerce of London at a luncheon today.

Such was the sentiment at the Geneva conference, he declared. Exaggerated tariffs were created because of the dislocation following the World War and misunderstanding of the benefits to be derived from correcting this situation, but both reasons were now removed. O'Leary declared that the United States had invested $20,000,000 in Europe since the beginning of the present year. During his speech he congratulated England upon breaking diplomatic relations with soviet Russia. He also referred to the Lindbergh and Chamberlain-Levine flights as useful in creating international commercial good will.

COOLIDGE DEFENDED IN USING WORM BAIT

Old-Time Anglers Declare Water Too High for Good Results With Flies.

Special to the Post-Dispatch. RAPID CITY, S. D., June 20.—Some one has been poaching on President Coolidge's private fishing preserve, which lies on Squaw Creek about five miles from the summer White House.

Fresh foot prints, made by waders, and new angle worm diggings are understood to have caught the eye of Mr. Coolidge the last time he went out after trout. An unofficial but quite authoritative report has it that the President inquired concerning the freshness of the marks.

Mr. Coolidge can have a good comeback at Senators Borah and Reed who joshed him for admitting dryly he used "a hook and worm" to catch his trout.

To get the "low down" on the question of fly fishing with worm fishing, the correspondent went to Oscar Johnson, head of state game wardens, and to an old bachelor fisherman who has been casting in the hills for 20 years.

"Worm fishing is all right at this time of the year. The water in the creeks is too high right now for good results for flies," they both said.

"But as for using flies to qualify as a game sport fisherman, there is nothing to it now, while it is cool, and the waters are high," Johnson and the old-timers said. "The President could not spinnin', but it is no more gamey to fish with them in a free creek than with worms. Fly fishing out here starts to get good early in July and improves up to late August."

"Right now a good many fishermen are using worms, particularly if they wish to make a catch. Of course, if a person is out merely for the sport of angling, with the prospect of few strikes, the flies may be used. But the water is too dark for the trout to see a fly to advantage. And once a trout gets the hook, he puts up as much fight over a worm as he does over a fly. There still is the thrill of landing them."

JOHN G. NEIHARDT

Optimistic

THE NEXT AGE OF MAN. By Albert Wiggam. (Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

Can we remain civilized? Has human evolution ceased? Will a scientific civilization force us up or down?

These questions, which have been discussed so often and in so many ways of late years, are not yet in the yellow leaf. They grow out of the perplexity that is inevitable in change, and without change there can be no life. It is a good guess that Mr. Wiggam knows no more about the future of mankind on this planet than do other men, but he has the merit of an optimistic outlook and a comprehensive view. He reminds one of Browning's poem: "Do I stop, I pick a rose; do I stand and stare, all's blue."

"My own belief," says Mr. Wiggam, "is that biology and psychology have recently placed in our hands new and powerful instruments and agencies by which man can greatly accelerate his own evolution, and that these discoveries of science are going to usher in a new age of man. Human nature, I think, has profoundly changed within the past 10,000 years. I believe we are better men than have ever lived; also that human nature is going to change even more rapidly in the comparatively near future than it has ever changed in the past." This, in brief, is the cheerful thesis of Mr. Wiggam's book.

THE CASE-BOOK OF SHERLOCK HOLMES.

By A. Conan Doyle. (Doran.)

Readers of detective tales will remember that Sherlock Holmes was so vital as to die twice before he was doubtfully dead. But, even he is not immune from the laws of nature. In this new work, Conan Doyle announces the discovery of the great detective's lost book, and from it he presents some cases not recorded in the other volumes. Watson is here again and other familiar names and faces.

SOUTHERN LITERARY STUDIES.

By C. Alphonso Smith. The University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill, N. C.

This is in the nature of a memorial volume to the late Prof. C. Alphonso Smith of the University of North Carolina, whose scattered writings on literature are here collected and prefaced with a biographical study of the author by F. Stringfellow Barr. Prof. Smith was one of the more notable scholars and literateurs of the South and is best known by his volume entitled "What Can Literature Do For Me?"

THE LURE OF THE GREAT SMOOKIES.

By Robert Lindsay Nelson. (Houghton Mifflin Co.)

The region of the Great Smoky Mountains, recently made into a national park, lies on the boundary line between Tennessee and North Carolina. It is a land of great natural beauty long neglected by the rest of the world. It is Mr. Nelson's purpose in this volume to reveal that beauty, and he has done in a convincing way. The volume is illustrated with numerous photographs of extraordinary quality.

MOTHER INDIA.

By Katherine Mayo. (Harcourt, Brace & Co.)

Here Katherine Mayo has done for India what she did for the Philippines in "The Isles of Fear." She deals with the inner life of the people and what she has to tell as the result of her investigations is hardly calculated to please the romantic reader. Much of it is horrifying, especially her discussion of the status of woman and of child marriages. After browsing awhile in this book, America seems like heaven.

WHAT AND WHY IN CHINA.

By Paul Hutchinson. (Willett, Clark & Colby, Chicago.)

A concise handbook on China, written by one who has spent years there, and designed to give the average man and woman a clearer understanding of the news from the Orient.

Payson & Clarke, who are issuing a series of English replicas of old volumes in the British Museum, announce that they have received letters from an enterprising clipping bureau addressed to Shakespeare, John Donne, Milton, William Blake, and William Colman. Each envelope bore the request, "Please forward." The letters informed the promising young authors that their books were "attracting considerable attention."

The manuscript of the book, "Charles Lindbergh: His Life," by Dale Van Every and Morris de Heves Tracy, was received by the publishers, D. Appleton & Co., at noon on Monday, June 6. Stock of the manufactured book was delivered Thursday, June 9. This is a record-breaker in the annals of book manufacturing.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's own story, written by himself, has just been secured for book publication by G. P. Putnam's Sons. This will be a specially prepared, detailed account touching upon his early life and his thrilling experiences, both in and out of the Air Mail Service, and describing fully his personal conception of his cross country and Atlantic flights, his preparations, the flights themselves, the instruments which made them possible, and the receptions accorded him by the governments of France, Belgium, Great Britain and the United States, as well as his ideas in regard to the future of aviation. Two editions will be available: a regular trade edition and a subscription edition at a higher price. Both editions will be ready in about two weeks.

DR. F. A. JOSTES OFFERED STATE SERVICE DIRECTORSHIP

Washington University Faculty Member May Head Work for Crippled Children.

COLUMBIA, Mo., June 20.—Directorship of the state service for crippled children, to be established here next month, has been offered to Dr. Frederick A. Jostes of Washington University School of Medicine. Dean Noyes of the University of Missouri Medical School announced yesterday.

The service was made possible by a $35,000 appropriation of the state legislature. Space will be found at first in the two students' hospitals of the university here, with an additional room in another university building where child patients may continue their school work. County Courts may recommend the service for children under 15 whose parents are unable to pay for surgical attention.

Dr. Jostes said, in St. Louis, today, that he had until the end of the week to decide whether to accept the offer. He is a staff surgeon of Barnes and Children's Hospitals, in charge of orthopedic service at Ridge Farm, and formerly was on the staff of the Sirrners' Hospital for Crippled Children. ## Lindbergh, Weary, Dreading Footlights, Flees Opera

Permits Himself to Be Led to Stage, Bows Slightly and Retreats Out of Theater to Host's Home

Utter weariness and abhorrence of the footlights reduced the appearance of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh at the Municipal Opera last night to a moment almost as fleeting as his public smile.

He permitted himself to be led from a box at the north side of the auditorium towards the stage, but when he felt the boards under his feet and the footlights smote his eyes, he hesitated and only under the urging of Former Mayor Kiel did he proceed to "front and center."

There he stood only a few seconds, bowing ever so slightly to the clamor; then he retreated off the stage, out of the theater and home.

The audience, said to have been the largest that ever assembled at the theater, was keenly disappointed that he did not speak, but a sympathetic murmur rippled the throng. "He looks so tired; he must have rest." It was the last event of the city's official welcome.

Col. Lindbergh is spending today at the home of Harry H. Knight

IDA MAY CHADWICK HEADLINES VAUDEVILLE AT THE ST. LOUIS

"Snookums," Baby Film Star, Is There, Too, to Prove Barnum Was Right.

Ida May Chadwick, tap dancer, and her blonde girl dancing assistants, top the week's vaudeville at the St. Louis Theater in spite of the attempt to Barnum the so-called "child movie star," otherwise known as "Snookums" and tolerably comical in film comedies. "Snookums" is preceded by a silly film introduction, stands on his head a time or two, grins and goes through a sort of a baby dance. If it's curiosity that's to be satisfied, maybe it will be.

Lewis and Dody of "Hello, Hello, Hello" fame; Dussie Rafter, the man who actually wrestles with himself—probably so as to admit beforehand that the match is a farce—and Brosius and Brown, in an unusual cycling comedy, make up the rest of the variety bill.

The week's photoplay, "The Secret Studio," in name only resembling a recent serial story of that title, is just another sex thing.

21 ARMY PLANES FLY AT 170 MILES AN HOUR OVER CITY

First Pursuit Group, by Coincidence, Appears Above Lindbergh Crowd
With 'Spirit of St. Louis.'

SWOOP TO WITHIN 100 FEET OF GROUND

Military Aviators Give Exhibition of Most Finished Formation Flying Ever Seen in St. Louis.

A stirring exhibition of the most finished formation flying St. Louis has ever seen—a sample of the teamwork of Army airmen at speeds above 170 miles an hour—was given yesterday afternoon by 21 crack flyers of the First Pursuit Group before the huge crowd that gathered on Art Hill yesterday to see Col. Lindbergh.

Lumbering "Jennies," bulky De Havillands and twin-motored Martin bombers have performed for St. Louisans in formation many times in past years, but they were loosely flown in comparison with the seven three-ship outfits that roared over Forest Park for half an hour.

Even with Lindbergh in the "Spirit of St. Louis" exhibiting his matchless airmanship to the crowd, Maj. Thomas Lanphier's fighting pilots managed to divert the audience's eyes many times to the temporary exclusion of the trans-Atlantic flyer. It was an exhibition on which no man could turn his back completely, even with Lindbergh in the air.

Coincidence in Appearance.
By a coincidence, the pursuit group hove into view in the northeast, just as the outstretched wings of Lindbergh's monoplane were sighted to the northwest. The coming of the fighting planes was heralded by a faint murmur of exultation that became a buzz and then a noisy hum.

The group was flying at 1500 feet, seven wedge-shaped flights of three ships each, one flight directly behind the other. The group was directly overhead, its crashing exhaust making a terrific racket, as Lindbergh came down over the lagoon at the foot of Art Hill in a power glide and zoomed sharply over the Forest Park bird-cage.

Of course, everybody watched Lindbergh but the cheering audience managed to keep one eye on the pursuit group as it whipped westward. Its formations were perfect in alignment. Each group of the three planes appeared to have been held together by invisible wires, so unvarying were the intervals.

Out to the northwest the flying group, strung out in a long line, swung in a graceful curve. Each flight banked as a single plane, the leading ship holding a constant altitude with its wings turned skyward in a right angle bank. The ships inside the turn lost altitude, and the ships on the outside climbed as they turned, so that each flight seemed to bank as a unit.

Meanwhile, Lindbergh had turned sharply and was coming down again in another glide. He swooped low over the lagoon, almost in the treetops, his engine chattering with its characteristic staccato sound, and climbed sharply to the west. How even was his flying, how exactly he maintained his lone flight, how gently and yet how steeply he pulled his ship up to zoom.

"A light han don the stick," a pilot in the speakers' stand commented.

21 Planes Swoop Downward.
But Slim had lost the center of the stage for a minute. Above the crowd, there was the maddened bellow of 21 12-cylinder motors at full throttle. Black and menacing against the sky the ships of the pursuit group were diving.

They seemed to grow in size as they swept toward the ground at a probable speed of 155 miles an hour. One ship appeared crowding upon another.

"I don't care so much for this," an infantry officer in the stand remarked. "What if they'd fail to pull up? And what hell they could play if they were turning their machine guns on a column of troops."

The roar of the motors became a full-throated crackle, like a factory full of buzz saws cutting through pine knots. At 300 feet Maj. Lanphier pulled up his plane and it swung swiftly into a climb. Precisely at the same altitude each following pilot pulled up so that at one point in the evolution the formation was in a U-shape with the arms pointing skyward and the closed side to the ground.

Within 100 Feet of Ground.
Again and again the pursuit planes dived for the ground. On the last visit eastward Lanphier flattened out just over the lagoon, passing before the crowd not 100 feet off the water with his pilots strung out behind them in faultless alignment.

As they climbed, one of the planes dropped out of formation with a missing motor. The pilot, Capt. St. Clair Street, rocked his plane and waved in token that he was all right and flew out to Lambert-St. Louis Field for emergency repair. The rest of the flight continued to Scott Field, its ranks as meticulously accurate when it disappeared as they were when it came into view.

Lindbergh a Pursuit Flyer.
Lindbergh, who was trained as a pursuit flyer himself, was as usual, the personification of expertness in the air above the crowd.

True to his policy not to stunt his airplane he confined his work to dives and zooms and finished off with a crabbing flight across the lagoon, with his wings pointed at an angle of 45 degrees to the earth. In a day or two, perhaps, he may find time to try his hand again at the stick of a pursuit ship, at which he is as expert as the flyers of Maj. Lanphier's organization.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—A suggestion that O. P. Van Swerin-

gen, railroad operator, be forced to disclose all facts as to his railroad stock purchases and personal bank borrowings in railroad stock transactions during the last five years was taken under consideration today by the Interstate Commerce Commission after argument by attorneys for parties to the contest over the Chesapeake

&amp; Ohio Railroad merger project.

Thomas R. Gay, representing minority Chesapeake &amp; Ohio

stockholders declared that it was their position that "every share of stock purchased in a railroad by an individual should be open to scrutiny."

from New York half way back across the continent of America, and the little flying it did today, has been in the air a little less than eighty hours. Or five hours less than it takes to travel from San Francisco to New York by train.

"Now, as I say, the plane has been in the air about 80 hours. The durability of the motor, without overhauling, is about 200 to 250 hours. With overhauling, its life is from 1000 to 1500 hours—ordinarily 20 times the amount of flying it has now done. The life of the plane is also about 1000 to 1500 hours.

"St. Louis is in an ideal location to be a center of air lines in the United States. Transcontinental lines from the Southwest to New York and lines from New Orleans to Chicago, St. Louis and others.

Types Air Ports for Every Town.

"The thing we need in America now, to promote aviation, is more than anything else, is a series of air ports at every town and city. It is necessary to have some means of landing close to the center of town.

"It takes nearly as long to go from St. Louis to the air terminal—from the Chicago air terminal to the city of Chicago—as it does to fly from St. Louis to Chicago. He must have fields close to the city. They do not have to be large, but it is only necessary to be able to land and discharge passengers, take the plane back to the larger air port farther out, and to come in, take the passengers on and go to the destination.

"With the proper co-operation, we can put St. Louis where she belongs as the center of aviation in the United States."

Steadily, sincerely his voice rang out, making the brief and awkward little speech.

To the crowd it had a grand sound. It suggested that the end of life did not appear to him to come at 25 with the plaudits of millions in one's ears. It was not a brilliant speech, but the crowd could think of all the foolish things he might have said, and didn't.

"I thank you," he said.

Then he looked along the cleared aisle, lined with soldiers, which ran through the heart of the multitude, up the hill to the statue of Saint Louis. His face was thoughtful. Presently, he was walking up the slope, a slender, unassuming youth, to lay a wreath in the shadows. That march sobered the crowd; cheering died, perhaps not to awaken again so loudly in his lifetime, but Lindbergh walked with an indifference to cheers, which won him at last the final tribute of heartfelt silence.

Filipinos at Tomb of W. A. Jones.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—A large group of Filipinos made a pilgrimage yesterday to Warsaw, where were placed on the tomb of William Atkinson Jones, author of the Jones law, the organic act of the Philippine Islands. The occasion was the first anniversary of the unveiling of the Jones memorial presented by the Filipino people in memory of the former Congressman.

Each speaker expressed that wonderment, indirectly. Each tried to answer it—middle-aged, successful men all, whose regard for the hero of the day was paternal. Secretary Davis, in presenting Lindbergh with a Colonel's commission in the Officers' Reserve, remarked: "Col. Lindbergh has charmed a world grown weary of scandal," Gov. Baker, before he handed Lindbergh a Colonel's commission in the National Guard, said: "Col. Lindbergh has revived our faith in the old-fashioned virtues of modesty and purity." One after the other the speakers referred to Mrs. Lindbergh, seated on the platform, saying that character begins with home inspiration.

The burden of the speechmaking was of ideals, and the message to Lindbergh from the grayheads who honored him seemed to be: "Youngster, when all this is done, your flight is yet before you."

The gray-heads had spoken. The time had come for the boy to make reply. He got to his feet and ducked his head to answer the applause. The crowd liked him at once.

He dug a hand in his pocket and looked impersonally at an audience which might have flattered an Emperor.

"This flight was made for the promotion of aeronautics," he said, "and to try to help put St. Louis where she belongs—at the head of aeronautics throughout the world."

"There could be no greater indication of the interest of the people of St. Louis in aeronautics than the fact that you have assembled here in this sun."

"I am not going to keep you here long, because it is just as up here as it is down there. At least, it feels that way."

PROPOSES 12-YEAR TERMS IN BRITISH HOUSE OF LORDS

Reform Bill Preserves Hereditary Principle, but Limits Service as Legislators.

LONDON, June 20.—The proposed reform of the House of Lords by the British Government includes granting of authorization to the sovereign to nominate a limited number of members for periods of 12 years. Lord Chancellor Cave announced during debate on reform proposals in the House of Lords today. The purpose of this authorization is to solve the present problem of the inadequate representation of Laborites in the upper chamber.

The Government proposes to preserve the hereditary principle of the House of Lords, but the number of members would be reduced by the selection from their ranks by hereditary peers of a fixed number to sit for 12-year periods, one-third retiring every fourth year, but being eligible to reappointment. The whole house would not number more than 250. Peers not elected to the House of Lords would be eligible to election in the House of Commons.

3 ARRESTED AS MEMBERS OF ILLINOIS 'BLACK HAND' RING

Bendit Resort Proprietor, Alleged Leader of Band, Goes on Hunger Strike.

CARLINSVILLE, Ill., June 20.—State Attorney L. M. Harlan today filed charges of extortion against three men arrested Thursday and Friday, Tommy Gendro, 30 years, Bendit resort proprietor, alleged leader of a "blackhand" ring, has refused food since being imprisoned.

A reputed confession by Pete Basalavach, 18, of Bendit, arrested Thursday night, named Gendro as leader of the Bendit ring, and member of a larger ring at Cleveland, O. Besides these two, Clifford Allen, 20, of Bendit, was arrested. Basalavach told of an attempt to extort $500 from Joe Zerbollo, Bendit garageman, last October. A letter mailed from St. Louis by Allen directed him, on threat of death to leave the money at a cemetery gate. Nothing came of the threat, as Zerbollo refused to deposit the money and reported the letter to the authorities.

The BILLIONAREA

~ the Greater St. Louis Market

For low selling costs, select concentrated markets

Where every sq. mile yields an $8,800,000 "crop"!

Every sales executive has the power to largely control both his volume of sales and his cost of sales by the type of market he selects.

The economics of producing sales volume in concentrated markets as compared to scattered markets are generally understood. But the tremendous differences that exist between these two types of markets are not always fully known and appreciated.

The national average purchasing power per family in metropolitan markets is approximately three times the general average of small town and rural communities. When the factor of accessibility is considered in connection with purchasing power, that difference becomes astounding.

From a selling and advertising standpoint, there is no more thought-stirring statement than this:—

rural communities outside The Billionarea. Every acre in the Greater St. Louis Market averages $13,300 industrial crop as compared with an average agricultural crop of only $11.64 per acre outside The Billionarea. The Billionarea is one of America's greatest opportunities for advertisers, not only because of low selling cost, due to concentration of people and buying power, but because of low advertising cost, due to the complete coverage of this market by one newspaper alone, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Because its circulation is almost entirely concentrated in The Billionarea the Post-Dispatch reaches practically every home of buying consequence in the entire market—so that the advertiser can cover The Billionarea completely with this one newspaper at one advertising cost.

Advertisers recognize this value and advantage as shown by the fact that they place more advertising, local, national and classified combined, in the Post-Dispatch than in the second and third St. Louis newspapers added together.

The Billionarea— The Greater St. Louis Market

The Billionarea is the Greater St. Louis market as it actually exists and as officially designated by the Audit Bureau of Circulations. Its boundary is simply the physical limits of metropolitan St. Louis on both the Missouri and Illinois sides of the Mississippi. It includes all (and only) that area where concentration of People, Dollars and Coverage (P+D+C) offers a volume market at low cost for advertisers.

P+D+C

The Advertiser's Micrometer of a Newspaper

The very principles that have been long recognized as fundamental in the analysis of any market are for exactly the same reasons fundamental in the analysis of a newspaper's market.

Those principles are the relation of Population, Dollars (or Purchasing Power) to Coverage.

The P+D+C Manual and the Book of Information about The Billionarea—the Greater St. Louis Market—will be mailed free to anyone interested in the advertising and sales opportunity of this market.

By Leased Wire From the New
York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch
NEW YORK, June 20.—The Evening
Post reported today, says:

"The stock market lacked character today largely because traders seemed to be even more uncertain than usual which way the cat would jump. This hesitancy was plainly reflected in irregular course of prices. Recognized leaders moved in opposite directions showing a wide difference of opinion if nothing else. With a dearth of real news professionals found time to survey the general financial and business situation and so uneasiness, either fancied or real, was expressed over the credit situation as a result of the third successive defeat in reserve in the weekly clearing house statement. Call money which renewed at four per cent looked firm to some at the start and there was some calling of loans. But later on money was in supply and outside loans were reported at 3 1/2 per cent.

Wait Loan Statement.
"Another reason for caution in speculative circles was the memory of the break which occurred following the publication of last week's brokerage loan statement. Traders were inclined to await this week's report to be published this afternoon with clean slates. Emphasizing the signs of slackening in business, certain professionals turned their batteries against the main body of stocks early and in particular instances pressure was brought about. Cuts were found to be susceptible to decline while motors broke more than three points to a new low since 1922. Reactionary tendencies were shown in steel common, Mack Truck and General Refractories.

Brokers' loans increased $41,447,000 to new record top of $41,447,000. The previous high was in January, 1926.

Houston Oil Up Sharply.
"Early losses ran from 1 to 3 points. In the afternoon bullish sentiment was revived in a faint-hearted way by the upbidding of one or two of the more volatile industrials. Houston Oil advanced about 8 points, the stock being taken in large blocks. Baldwin Locomotive was a strong feature. The buying was based on expectation of a favorable gas franchise for the company from the city of Houston. Tobacco gave a demonstration of group strength under the leadership of Consolidated Cigar. New peak prices were established by about a score of stocks, including Air Reduction, American Bank Note, American Steel Foundries, Sears-Robinson, Vividous, St. Paul preferred, Chicago & Alton preferred and Kansas City Southern. As a matter of fact, Kansas City Southern sold at the highest price of its history at 62 1/2, up 2 1/2 points. The advance in the stock was due to the favorable showing of HRS may earnings.

Afternoon Market Stronger.
"Steel Price was a feature of outstanding strength in the rails, advancing more than 5 points. Rails were generally strong, with Lehigh Valley in the forefront with more than a point gain. A strong tone was displayed in the food shares, particularly Continental Baking 'A', National Biscuit and Postum Cereal. The market in the late afternoon became more uniform and decidedly stronger. Most of the early losses were wiped out. The bond market was irregular and prices of the standard issues were changed, mostly downward.

Cotton Is Quiet.
"The wheat market was active and generally higher, cotton was quiet and slightly lower.

Foreign Exchange Irregular.
"Foreign exchanges were irregular, with sterling off slightly and francs holding steady.

LAMBERT CO. TO ACQUIRE MORE PHARMACAL CO. STOCK

Stockholders of Lambert Co. are being offered 50,000 shares of new capital stock at $47.50 a share, in the ratio of eight shares of new stock for each 45 shares now held. Proceeds will be used to buy 50,000 additional shares of Lambert Pharmacal Co. stock, which would bring the total of that company's stock owned to 64 per cent. Rights accrue to stock of record June 27.

NEW YORK SUGAR.
NEW YORK, June 20.—Raw sugar futures, 16 months, closed at 14.50, down 1/4. The market was active and generally higher, with a strong tone in the food shares, particularly Continental Baking 'A', National Biscuit and Postum Cereal. The market in the late afternoon became more uniform and decidedly stronger. Most of the early losses were wiped out. The bond market was irregular and prices of the standard issues were changed, mostly downward.

FUTURES ADVANCE

ON SOUTHWEST RAIN

associated Press.

St. Louis. Dec. 26.—Despite heavy rain and wheat harvest recent south- west and advanced weather reports indicated that the rains would be of little benefit to Kansas and prospects in some sections of the wheat belt are not so bright as they were a few days ago. The crop near maturity is being harvested in some sections and a forecast of an early start in the market is being made.

At the net lower range, corn 1 1/2 to 1 3/4 down, soybeans 10 to 12c decline and clover 70 to 10c up. Wheat is 10 to 15c down, but some new higher bids are being received and subsequent action shows some recovery. Corn and soybeans are in good demand.

At St. Louis, bullish influence due to reports of conditions for domestic corn again being favorable and a new loan being authorized by the government again caused a sharp advance in the market. The reduction in the 100,000 bushels of wheat available little in excess of the 200,000 bushels. Domestic shipments were smaller than last week.

At Chicago, the market was somewhat bearish due to the forecast of a warmer winter and a heavy crop of wheat.

AMERICAN GIRL ATTACKED IN CEMETERY NEAR PARIS

Volunteer Guide Knocks Her Down, Escapes with Gold Cigarette Case.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, June 20.—The police are making a thorough search for a volunteer guide, who, while showing Miss Mary Stewart of the American Department of Labor through Pere-Lachaise Cemetery on Whit Sunday, attacked her, knocked out two of her teeth and bruised her face grievously, then ran away with a gold cigarette case which he snatched from her handbag.

Miss Stewart was taken to the British Hospital, where her injuries were treated and then to the American Hospital, where she is recovering.

The American girl was the victim of one of the individuals that haunt the woods, parks and cemeteries around Paris looking for a chance to snatch handbags and pick pockets. She arrived at the cemetery unaccompanied; a man offered her services as guide and showed her through the main roads. He then led her to a secluded spot and suddenly struck her in the face. Her cries brought and to the spot, whereupon her assailant took to his heels with nothing more than the cigarette case as booty.

The American Embassy has called the matter to the attention of the police, but the man has not been apprehended. The girl probably will leave the hospital in a few days.

Accused Doctor Ends Life.

CHICAGO, June 20.—After sending his two young sons to Sunday school, Dr. George F. Slater, wealthy Chicago physician and real estate operator, ended his life by poison at his home yesterday. Dr. Slater had been ordered by the Coroner to appear at the inquest into the death of a young mother today. The woman's husband charged that she had been a patient of Dr. Slater. The doctor was 52 years old and a native of Fort Wayne, Ind.

FAVOR U. S.-CANADIAN $350,000,000 CANAL

New England Conferees Vote Unanimously for Great Lakes-to-Atlantic Shipway.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—Urging the United States to negotiate a treaty with Canada to promptly consummate the project, a committee representing all six of the New England States has unanimously approved the construction of the two Governments of a navigable waterway from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic via the St. Lawrence River.

The waterway, by the reduction in transportation costs, said the committee's report, made public here yesterday, would "afford more real relief" to the Middle Western and Central States farmers than any other proposal for the amelioration of their condition. It was described as "a capital investment of national character" and the promised reduced transportation costs and prosperity would return "exceptionally large dividends."

The committee, headed by Charles E. Gow of Boston, and composed of 29 other representatives of business and public interests in New England, five from each state, was organized in November, 1925, as the joint New England-St. Lawrence waterway committee.

The report rejected all proposals for alternative "all-American" waterways on the basis of costs and economic benefits, declaring that any military protection aim was "an unwarranted insult to a friendly neighbor" and terming Canada as "a highly valued commercial ally."

A return from power development on the river would pay for much of the construction cost, the report said. Although the project's cost was estimated between $250,000,000 and $350,000,000, the committee said this return would make a net cost of between $125,000,000 and $145,000,000. The power development would be afforded by a waterfall of 244 feet from Lake Ontario to Montreal.

An addition of 400 miles or approximately 50 per cent, to the nation's coast line would be afforded by the outlet to the sea, according to the report. Annual exports of from $500,000 to $1,000,000 tons, with imports of $1,000,000 to $2,000,000 tons, would travel over the channel, it was estimated. Railroads would benefit in the long run by increased prosperity and freight tonnage, the committee believed.

The South Is Coming Back! And the Missouri Pacific Lines Will Continue to Help

CONTRARY to what is general opinion in many quarters, the Mississippi Valley is far from damaged irreparably as a result of recent floods and storms. It is true that property damage in many localities has been enormous and many individuals have seen the savings of a lifetime swept away in the rising waters. And the Missouri Pacific Lines, along with other interests in the affected area, have suffered tremendously. But the country is coming back—stronger and better than ever before—and the Missouri Pacific Lines have established an enviable record in their own recovery.

Gigantic work remains to be done. But it will be done—it is being done. And the "silver lining" to this particular cloud lies in the fact that as a result of this greatest disaster in the history of our country, something will be done—to prevent a similar devastation ever again occurring.

In order to understand the question it is well to remember that the trouble really began last fall when general and heavy rains swelled the tributaries of the Mississippi and that river itself and after putting the weight of rising waters against the levees, kept it there unceasingly until the pent-up waters, further augmented by unusually heavy and general spring rains, tore over and through the weakened barriers.

It must be remembered, too, that virtually all tributaries of the Mississippi reached flood levels and higher almost simultaneously in April and May. And, on the west side of the Mississippi river a great part of the damage resulted from overflows of the tributaries, in addition to the damage wrought by breaks in the Mississippi levees.

The South is coming back. A great part of the affected area will come back this year. But this is a national problem and it must never be permitted to happen again. Whatever is necessary to prevent a recurrence must be done.

Meantime it has been demonstrated again that the best friend a people can have at a time like this is a railroad like the Missouri Pacific Lines, in a position to render the emergency help so urgently needed when trouble of this kind descends on a community or a region.

We are naturally pleased with the part the Missouri Pacific Lines have played throughout the troubles, and we are glad we were in a position to aid and help direct rescue work, furnish thousands of cars as temporary refuge for flood sufferers, play a leading role in handling relief workers and relief supplies, and take the lead in rehabilitation work such as disease and epidemic prevention and agricultural rehabilitation. We did not fail those dependent on us for transportation in their time of greatest need. And we are gratified with the speed and effectiveness with which our tracks have been put back in use and our service restored to its former high level of regularity and dependability.

And, just as we played a leading part in the emergency work incident to the floods, so we want and expect to continue to do our part in the complete rehabilitation of the damaged regions and the prevention of similar occurrences ever happening again.

I solicit your co-operation and suggestions.

The new structure is to be known as Manhattan Hall. The ground floor will serve as the church auditorium and will have stores on either side. The upper floors will be utilized as apartments for persons acceptable to the church and will contain 600 rooms and 400 baths. The building also will contain a gymnasium, social hall, banquet hall and offices.

Starring Dulcie Jayne

VIRGINIA TRACY

INSTALLMENT XXXIII.
THE RIOT.

"HE maid came in again, locking the door behind her, and Dulcie yelled for her to come help pick up the pieces in the bathroom. So I made my getaway as far as the door, unlocked it, sneaking through—and then, for some reason, I turned and looked back. Right through, out to the balcony. And coming up over the balcony railing was a hand. Then the whole tall shadow of a man stood up on the balcony. He came through the dark into the light room and he wasn't Dan Leland, either. It was this Henry Horner. I told you about the bum I had to throw out of my scenario department."

"Then, as I turned to send for my father, I heard a queer sound. Down runs one of the staff from an upper window yelling to the proprietor how they were coming in from the desert hollering for money that was owing to them. Then I was on. It was my treasurer's blood they were after!"

"In luck," I said to myself. For it came to me how much better they could do my job than the hotel could. Henry Horner, making a fool of me all this time, with his board! Shaving it off today and standing on the corner of the street in a white suit holding her hand. And now for the showdown!"

"By the time the first of them had got round into the street I was in a window over the front door cutting off the interpreter they'd brought with 'em—our interpreter, if you please. Henry had hired—telling him to tell them it wasn't me had done them out of their money; my treasurer'd started out with it but had been attacked on the way and robbed, murdered maybe—I thought he had, you know—but unless I was much mistaken I had just laid eyes on the thief."

"Come bedlam! Now, listen, I told them. 'Don't take my word; maybe I made a mistake. But about the same time as you could be heard coming in here I saw a man climb up the side of the hotel and hide on that balcony,' and I pointed back through the lobby across the courtyard. 'When the light from the room there fell on his face I saw it was an old employee of mine I'd discharged in America and who's had a spite against me ever since. I found out today he's followed me over here and been living here in disguise. I saw him climb up like a thief in the night and creep into that room! He's hiding there, that room, now! Ask him where your money is!' I said."

"By the time I'd chased to my own room and out onto my own balcony to see the show they'd pushed past everything the hotel people could do to hold 'em and were getting into the court. Nor they hadn't lost track of where was Miss Jayne's windows. They couldn't. Because there was Henry Horner with one leg over the balcony, trying to get down and there was Dulcie Jayne holding on to him, trying to keep him up."

"Finally he got both her hands off him at the same time as she got her hands off him. She was shouting, 'Look! Look! See! She's yelling, stretching her hand out. Some of them lifted up the torches they were carrying and saw the ring on her finger. The interpreter was interpreting to beat the band, and 'Pas de thief!' she calls out to the Frenchmen in the crowd. 'Mun Mariet!' or some such word. 'American! Mariet me consolez aujourd'hui!'"

"By this time she was up, leaning over so far she'd got a strange hold on his neck with her right arm, and she hung the left one down loose. 'Look! Look! See!' she yelled, stretching her hand out. Some of them lifted up the torches they were carrying and saw the ring on her finger. The interpreter was interpreting to beat the band, and 'Pas de thief!' she calls out to the Frenchmen in the crowd. 'Mun Mariet!' or some such word. 'American! Mariet me consolez aujourd'hui!'"

"The whole silly mob burst into a great roar of laughter, yapping out cheers. She said to Horner, 'O, darling, come back! Maybe he didn't look foolish doing it! But grinning. And he kissed her on the mouth somehow or other he had about seventy dollars on him in cash, pretty near as much as the pay roll of the entire desert, including the wild animals, which he threw into the crowd for it to go off and drink the bride's health."

"The joke was on me, you're thinking, gentlemen. Well, maybe now it's up to me to pass the buck. She'd married him, all right. So she owes this firm one hundred thousand dollars. And I've here to get it. And I can keep her here off the street for three years. I've come home to do that."

"Miss Jacobs stayed home with the flu, and that evening some one telephoned asking if Miss Marsh wasn't too tired, wouldn't she come and see Miss Jacobs a minute. She went."

"Keep your coat on you. The way I got to take this window open, I guess it's pneumonia. I'm down with. So I'm likely to go off my head any minute, and I want to ask you, Miss Marsh."

Till finally he got both her hands off him at the same time.

would you keep an eye on the filling cabinet? I expect you read all Lyman had to say in the papers?" "Yes," replied Cornelia, startled. "What mean is, look out. I mean—you know what I mean! Mr. Horner's a long ways off. He's taking 'em in charge like he left me. But some times a person can't. 'Who's in charge of it now, Miss Marsh?"

"Mr. Leach called Miss Fry in. Lyman hasn't come over yet at all."

"She hasn't got any sense," Miss Jacobs slowly and heavily replied, ignoring Cornelia's second statement. "Might leave it open—or—let the card catalogue get mixed. Ask Mr. Leach can't you stay there 'cause—the other room's chilly, maybe. I know it's not much use. But it's Mr. Horner's not being here, see? When a person's sick they get those."

Monday dawned, an icy glare. The ferry, its schedule entirely disorganized, sent out its boats through ice. When Cornelia finally shivered on to the Jersey shore, half an hour later, she was met by the information that there were no cars running and the only means of transport was by foot.

Across the tracks, far off along the road, a dark speck emerged, bulked, bumped slowly nearer, became an open wagon drawn by two horses. When Cornelia had crawled in between the boards laid across it and sat down on the bottom her hand was too cold to draw the 'trap around her.

But, at Horner's, the steam heaters were upholding themselves. From the empty scenario department Cornelia took a novel and writing materials into the department's old quarters, now Mr. Leach's room. No Mr. Leach. No sound from across the partition. The world was empty. Cornelia sat down in a big rocker, ready to luxuriate in the smell and the size of steam, eager to be lapped in that dense, thick heat.

ABIE'S IRISH ROSE

"The States!"

He straightened suddenly. "New York, perhaps?"

"Well—yes, perhaps," laughed Rose-Mary.

He bent forward with sudden earnestness. "I'd like to think that I could hear you sing there some time?"

She heard him in obvious surprise, those blue eyes first amused, then searching. And then warm lips broke into a tender smile. "I don't live in New York—but I expect to be there again. To go on with my music."

"And if I should look you up?"

Another pause. Then: "Do look me up! And her clear voice thrilled him. "Goodbye! They're calling you!"

"Goodbye!"

Her fingers were in his cool, electric. Then he was clattering down the steps, to the aisle.

But he stopped at the door to look back. A knot of men was already about her; Lieutenant Cooper was bending over her. Yet she had not forgotten him entirely; he saw her wave to him, a gay, unforgettable little gesture, one hand lifted high. He waved back, waiting to make sure that she saw him; then: "Abie!"

"Hey, you!"

He was in the night air, in a sea of men, the night sky filled with an ominous humming sound, little Patsy Dunn at his elbow; and somewhere nearby, in the dark, a scornful-voice was rebuking someone:

"Aw, forget that stuff! Who are you, to wanta meet her? You a Yid named Cohen! Why, look at her name, kid—look at her name! She's Irish 'y' foot, she's Irish!"

The Repetition Job and the Worker's Health

By Chas. A. L. Reed, M. D.

Former President of the American Medical Association

IN every large factory or workshop there are certain jobs that involve a limited range of activity, doing the same thing over and over again. This is what science recognizes as a repetition job. This uniformity and continuity of work without the close incentive of competition and without diversion causes monotony by robbing the work of interest. Repetition is not a new problem. Even a country shoemaker makes one boot after another, domestic work is often rather uninspiring routine and in homeing a 20-acre field a large number of very similar movements are made. But through the logical extension of a process that began soon as men ceased to provide all things for themselves, an increasing number of people do repetition work.

In consequence of this fact, the average length of the working cycle becomes progressively shorter. In order to increase the rapidity of production and lower the price of goods, manufacturers divide the operations of the work and specialize the functions of the workers more and more. Where one man used to perform the whole work of making a boot, scores of men now divide the work among themselves, each using special knowledge and skill of years on one fraction of the process. This subdivision and specialization leave increasingly less room for self-expression and consequently for interest.

Interest is only possible while the work is still able to call out new reactions in the worker and to set him new problems.

The modern worker finds that in the one small process with which he is concerned, he soon overcomes all the difficulties and exhausts all the surprises. His own contribution is buried under the work of many hands, and his only incentive is to pass a standard and to achieve output. He can no longer find scope for personal expression in his work, and he regards it as a price that he has to pay for his leisure. This is fatal to his happiness and the unhappy worker is never a worker of maximum efficiency.

Although with increased uniformity of material there is a steady pressure toward increasing continuity of work, in actual practice, work is rarely continuous. Dr. Vernon of the Industrial Fatigue Research Board of Great Britain selected 30 apparently continuous jobs in the manufacture of boots and shoes and tin cans, in laundry work and in packing operations, and investigated them. He found that each occurred in many reasons; work had to be carried away or fetched, machines had to be cleaned and adjusted, delays occurred in the provision of materials, and in handkerchief folding, the most continuous of all, an average of three breaks occurred in the hour, with a total of four and a half minutes. In other jobs there were breaks of as much as 11 minutes in the hour. From one point of view this unproductive time is waste. But output does not entirely depend on productive time. If a worker who habitually sits at his work can get up, walk about and talk, even for only a minute in each 20, the monotony of his work is considerably reduced and his output is correspondingly increased.

The wise manufacturer recognizes this principle and turns it to his profit by affording rest breaks for his workers. He then has a personnel that is at once healthy, happy and efficient.

Seen on Fifth Avenue

A stylish costume consists of a one-piece frock of crepe de Chine printed with small pink flowers, and a rose d'herakasha slip-on sweater. An interesting necklace is added by a large handkerchief of crepe de Chine worn knotted on the left shoulder.

The beige, parchment and tan shades of kid are the favorites of the moment for afternoon shoes.

Stockings in many pastel shades with darker heels are appearing for summer. Even shades of pale green, blue and orchid are shown. To be worn, of course, with matching or contrasting frocks and shoes.

Costume jewelry was never so important as it is now. Ropes of pearls, chains of diamonds, white gold or tortoise-shell bracelets, 20 or 30 of them on the same arm, are very popular. A new fad consists of a twisted gold necklace, resembling a glittering snake. Sometimes one gold and one silver necklace are combined, and bracelets to match are worn. But it is important that one use discretion in choosing this extreme jewelry, as there is but a short step between the smart and the bizarre or ridiculous.

Southern Chocolate Loaf Cake. Grate a quarter cake of unsweetened chocolate, beat it into a cupful of milk, beating it gently until thick. Beat to a cream one cupful of sugar and a heaping tablespoonful of butter. Add the yolks of eight eggs and beat until smooth. Sift one and a half cupfuls of flour in which two spoonfuls of baking powder has been mixed; next add the boiled chocolate and beat until very smooth; then add the beaten whites of the eggs, beaten stiff and dry, and then a teaspoonful of vanilla. Pour into a buttered cake pan and bake in a medium oven three-quarters of an hour. This cake may be frosted if desired.

The Diary of a New Father

Sunday afternoon.

I HAVE lots of troubles, but on the other hand the baby has learned to sleep. Yesterday morning we moved from the apartment into our new bungalow, and we spent all day getting settled, but we are not settled yet and I do not think we ever will be, and that Stewart family, who used to make me miserable in the apartment and are buying the bungalow next door to ours, have been eating their meals here over the week-end on account of Mr. Stewart being so dumb he did not have his gas and lights and water turned on before they moved.

So this morning they were here to eat breakfast and to get our bathroom dirty getting cleaned up, and then they had to go home again, thank heaven, to finish their unpacking, and I needed a rest, but I started to shave on account of it, and I just sat down to read the paper your wife will find some more work for you to do.

I left the bathroom door open so I could hear Jean whenever she asked me where had I put something and well, for heaven's sake, why there? and all of a sudden I heard her running and she yelled "Look out! Don't move!" right behind me, and I jumped a foot and cut myself something terrible, and I looked around and she was scooping the baby up from under my feet, and the last time I had seen him he was sitting on the floor in the living room busting the squeak in his teddy bear.

Well, last week he started saying "Daddy," and now he crawls, and him only seven months old!

Joan said, "The little darlings has learned to crawl!" and I said, "Well, let him crawl, then. Don't stand there holding him. Bring him out to the living room," and she did, and I said, "Now crawl to daddy, and she said, 'You're covered with blood!' and I ran back to the bathroom and looked in the mirror, and I scared myself."

Joan came in after me and she said, "How on earth did you do it?" and I said, "I didn't do it. You did it when you made all that fuss about the baby, darn it!" She said, "Well, stand still, can't you?" and she started to wash the blood off, and just then there was another yell, and she galloped out, leaving me dying, for all she knew, and the baby had been crawling around some more and he had bumped his head on a chair, and he was sore about it.

Joan said, "Poor little baby, and she picked him up and petted him, and I said, 'What about poor papa?' I suppose I can just bleed to death," and the baby kept on crying and Joan kept on petting him, and me getting blood poisoning for all she knew, and I said, "You're not hurt," and that made him sorer than ever, and we are not on good terms yet, and here it is me who got all scared up, but I am not sure at him about it. I look like the unidentified man who was found.

Fruit Salad in Shells.

Bake the shells in the individual way described. Prepare the fruits in the usual way, removing skins, seeds, white fiber; then set to chill. When ready to serve drain off the juice, dust with a very little powdered sugar; then add a dressing made of a tablespoonful of lemon juice, two tablespoonfuls of French olive oil, a heaping spoonful of salt, and the same of paprika. Pour over the salad and let stand in a cool place 10 minutes; then drain and fill the shells with the salad. Garnish with sliced stuffed olives and a heaping spoonful of white mayonnaise, made, of course, without mustard.

Take Time

By ANGELO PATRI.

Angelo Patri is just the principal of a New York grade school, but the late Charles W. Eliot, president of Harvard, said Patri is doing more for common-school education than any other person in America. This school, a model in every respect, is a mecca for teachers from all parts of the country.

"I DON'T believe mother'll let us go,"

"O, we can get out to say yes and then she'll have to stick to it."

"She won't let us go if she knows we are going to swim."

"We'll keep that dark and when she says we can go we won't take it back. We won't be her."

"Shall I find it out for her?"

"No she won't. Even if she does, what of it? We've been and had the fun. You leave it to me!"

So Margaret watched her chance. When mother was busy feeding the baby carrots and watching the meat in the oven and setting the table without help from her two daughters, the opportunity was ripe.

"Mother, the girls are going to picnic on Green Point. Saturday. Can we go along? Everybody's going."

"I'll see."

"We have to know tonight, mother. The girls have to know about the seats in the bus and the refreshments. We can go, can't we?"

"Yes, I suppose so."

But fate was against the shrewd Margaret this time. One of the mothers met and talked to her mother and said, "I knew how careful you were about your girls so when I heard you allowed yours to go I said Mary might go, too. I'm nervous about their swimming in the river when there is no older person in the water but if you think it is all right why I do too."

"But I don't think it is right," said mother bravely. "I was not giving the matter the attention I should have given it or I never would have allowed the girls to go. I would not think of their going swimming without a life guard on duty. Had they told me that I should have said—no. I will not allow them to go now under any consideration."

"Why mother, you SAID we could go," said Margaret in aggrieved tones. "You ought to keep your word."

"I ought to indeed," said mother. "I have said that you must not go in swimming without the life guard being on duty and I intend to keep my word. Had I known what your intentions were I should have said no when you asked. And the worst part of it is that you know that, I am ashamed of you. Such planning is not worthy of you."

"I blame myself for not taking time to think over your request. Hereafter I will not answer. The thing of the sort until I have had time to think it over carefully. I intend to take time. You will never be able to hurry me into answering you like that again."

It is always well to take time to think.

RECIPES FROM "My Old Virginia Cook Book"

Apple Dumplings

TAKE as many apples as thought needed. Pare and core them and cut into good-sized pieces. Take two cups of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one-half cup of sweet milk, one-half teaspoonful of salt.

Sift the flour, baking powder and salt together. Work in the butter with the finger tips and then add the milk, mixing dough as quickly as possible. Roll out to about one-fourth inch thick and cut into eight pieces. Fill the center of each piece with some of the apple, catch up the ends of the dough and pinch them together so that the apples will be well covered. Tie each dumpling in a scalded, well-floured cloth, leaving room for dumping to swell. Have a kettle of boiling water with an old plate in the bottom. When water is boiling, drop in the dumplings and cook for about one hour. Serve at once with sugar, butter and cream or a sauce.

Apple Dumplings
Take as many apples as you need. Pare and core them and cut into good-sized pieces. Take two cups of sugar, two tablespoons of baking powder, two tablespoons of salt, one-half cup of sweet butter and one-half teaspoonful of cinnamon.
Mix the flour, baking powder and salt together. Work in the butter with the finger tips and add the milk, mixing dough as thick as possible. Roll out about one-fourth inch thick and cut into eight pieces. Fill center of each piece with one of the apple pieces and pinch the dough around the apple so it is well covered. The each piece is in a scalded, well-oiled cloth, leaving room for rolling to swell. Have a kettle of boiling water with a lid on it in the bottom. When water is boiling, drop in the dumplings and cook for about one hour. Serve at once with sugar, butter and cream or a sauce.

Flapper Figure Has Had Its Day, Says Paul Poiret.

It Must Pass, Declares Great Paris Couturier, or the Women Who Seek It Will Pay the Penalty, Because
It Is Against Nature's Law

EUROPEAN scientists say the pursuit of the boyish figure is sending thousands of women to hospitals and tuberculosis camps. European artists and creators of fashions say womanly conlines cannot be achieved with straight lines.

Pierre and Coralie Van Paassen, special European correspondents of the Post-Dispatch have interviewed scores of professors and artists. With scarcely a dissenting voice they say the flapper figure for mothers and grandmothers must go.

By PIERRE VAN PAASSEN.
"I AM going to New York to preach a crusade, like that of the hermit in history, Peter of Amiens. He wanted the masses to wear the Holy Land from the hands of the unbelievers and the hands of the artists. I am going to New York and say: 'Mendace les Americaines, God wants you to be normal!'"

So talked Monsieur Paul Poiret, the world-famous fashion creator, in his sumptuous studio on the Champs Elysees, the smartest and steepest street in the world, when I came to ask his opinion on the silhouette or boyish figure type that has captured the imagination of French, German, American, Dutch, Rumanian, Slavonian and Russian women alike.

It was a golden spring day. The first chestnut blossoms were beginning to color the avenues below as Monsieur Poiret led me to the window.

"There you have the trees and flowers awakening after a tranquil winter's sleep," he said. "Is there anything to rival this panorama for sublime beauty? Can any human artist conceive a more gorgeous color scheme?" he asked. "No, Nature is still the supreme artist and mistress of arts. How can we think, then, of resisting that imperious and enchanting mistress? How dare we destroy or even modify that which she has created?"

"I am going to New York, because I am alarmed. If my word has any value, the boyish type has had its day. I am going to tell the American women that it is impossible to reduce Nature to slavery. They are artful, they are charming, those American women. They have enslaved millions of strong men, but they cannot enslave Nature, our mother."

Nature Supreme Arbitrator.
"Stoutness or a little embonpoint does not prevent a woman from being elegant. The couturier of talent will take care of her. He will assist Nature, but he must not go contrary to Nature's commands. 'There are no women in the world like the American. They wear their clothes well. They have grace and carriage. I have yet to meet the man or woman of taste who has been over there and has not exclaimed in wonder about their chic and taste. 'Are they going to ruin that reputation? Are they going to deform themselves to please a passing fashion? With the American woman it is a question of natural endowment, this elegance. The little flapper typists walking from the Woolworth Building to the subway entrance have it, and the girls in Pittsburgh and Chicago possess the elusive charm. To insist upon a change is to go contrary to natural gifts, and in my estimation it will be disastrous. 'The mode of silhouette figures has had its day. It's dying. It only needs the coup de grace and it will have passed into history. I think.'"

Monsieur Lucien Lelong, another tone-giving fashion expert, is practically of the same opinion. He has come to realize that the boyish figure cannot be achieved by every woman who wants to follow the fashion. But he bows before the universal female desire to look slim, tall, elegant and supple. What they cannot achieve, however, without risking their health, he is prepared to help by means of a scientific method of optic illusions. He calls this "kynoptics." "Kynoptics" is a system of dress designing that essays, and quite successfully, to impart the appearance of slenderness and youthfulness. And considering that fashion is after all, nothing but a matter of appearance, Monsieur Lelong succeeds signally to satisfy.

Age Cannot Hold Youth.
Chutzin, Hungarian sculptor of the ultra-modern school, whose work has a decided success at the Independent Salon this year, believes that the boyish figure belongs to youth. M. Chutzin is a little harsh.

"Women who are no longer young are not entitled to young bodies. It is a physical impossibility. They may prolong their youth. Some of them are quite successful at it. But they can't hold on to it forever. It is an elusive, thing, youth."

"Moreover, it isn't fair," he continued. "I like my grandmother to have the mellow grace that comes with middle age or old age. I don't want her to be a Charleston flapper, who black bottoms around till the sheiks themselves get dizzy."

"Can you think of a picture more beautiful than you can see any day on the waterfront of Naples or any Mediterranean port: a gray-haired woman, with serene and noble face, sunning herself in the doorway while her grandchildren play at her feet? She is content and happy. Life has brought her no regrets. She contemplates her world with a serene and clear eye. Ah, there is such beauty in those humblest things of life.

Statue of Ceres in the Louvre

Paul Poiret in his atelier.

Wanted The American Leg.
"But think of that same woman trying to ape the flapper grand-daughter; ridiculous, isn't it? Ridiculous and repugnant. You say it's all the rage in America. I am not surprised. Americans, wherever America is concerned, if somebody gets up the notion to walk on hands and feet, I would not be surprised to see it accepted in all seriousness. Of course, I am speaking figuratively. Nobody will suggest such a thing. Americans, after all, have a practical sub-consciousness. But they fall hardest of all people I know for any damn fool fad that comes along. The worst of it is nobody thinks himself or herself smart these days if he or she does not in some way resemble an American."

"I had a model last winter, a Greek girl, who asked me: 'Don't you think I have quite an American leg?' Can you beat it? 'American leg?' What is an American leg? 'Don't drive me crazy by having me try to answer my own question. I am thirsty.'"

"The Salon of the Independent Artists gave me no inkling that the coming masters looked with favor upon the silhouette type. One painter travestied the mode by executing a nude that seemed more of a skeleton. Arms and shoulders were angular and protruding. She looked like one of these pictures from war posters showing starved Belgian or Armenian orphans. You instinctively looked for the inscription: 'Remember Belgium!' or 'Help to Save the Armenian Orphan!' or something of that order. Instead the artist had scribbled beneath in ringing red paint: 'Silhouette 1930.' He wanted to show or warn perhaps that if the present boyish type, silhouette fashion, remained in vogue for another 30 years you would see a collection of skin and bones."

THE RHYMING
OPTIMIST
By Aline Michaelis

CHERISHED MEMORIES.

HOW strange it seems that at the set of sun the thoughts you hold most closely to your heart are not of splendid triumphs you have won, great struggles where you played the victor's part! You cherish not gifts kindly years bestowed or any rank or fortune you attained, prize not the strength with which you bore your load or joy of heights whose shining peaks you gained; not these, but little fleeting things like words a loved one spoke at twilight long ago; a Springtime hour when, to the ring of birds, you glimpsed new beauty in a soul you know. How strange it seems that at the close of day the thing that brings most gladness to your thought should be remembered laughter, sweet and gay, or some kind kindness that your hands have wrought.

Morning Glories for Evening.
Morning glories for evening seems rather contradictory, and yet an oblong, green chignon evening scarf effects this charming inconsistency by having an all-over design of deep red and purple morning glories.

In anything, from love to play.

—Old Man Coyote.

OLD MAN COYOTE was growing thin. Yes, sir, he was growing thin. Peter Rabbit noticed it when Old Man Coyote passed the dear Old Briar-patch. To be sure, he never had been fat. He runs about too much to ever get fat. But he was thinner than ever before.

"What is the matter with him anyway?" asked little Mrs. Peter. "He looks as if he had lost his last friend."

Peter chuckled. "He's in love," said Peter. "That's all that's the matter with Old Man Coyote—he's in love."

"I don't believe it," said little Mrs. Peter. "Being in love wouldn't make him look like that. What are you chuckling about?"

"I was just remembering," said Peter. "Remembering what?" asked little Mrs. Peter, eyeing him suspiciously. "The fact that the fact is he was trying not to think of Miss Coyote at all. He trotted along in a very determined way. Presently he came to where the little path turned around a great rock. Old Man Coyote trotted around the rock and then he suddenly stood as still as if carved from stone. Not even a hair on him moved. He held his breath. There, sitting in the path just ahead of him and back to him, was Miss Coyote herself."

Old Man Coyote didn't know what to do. He was afraid to move. Yes, sir, he was afraid to move. He was afraid that the instant he moved she would see him, or hear him, and disappear, as she had disappeared so many times. So he stood there unmoving. He was sure that she didn't know that he was there, for she was sitting in a most unconcerned manner exactly as if she thought herself all alone. Poor Old Man Coyote! He didn't know what he ought to do and he was so afraid of doing the wrong thing. And just then something very wonderful happened. Miss Coyote turned her head, looked him full in the face and grinned. At last she wasn't going to run from him.

"It's no use," muttered Old Man Coyote. "I'll go away from here. Yes, sir, I'll go away from here. I'll go away off. It's very plain that Miss Coyote doesn't want to have anything to do with me. So I'll go off where she'll never see or hear from me. That's what I'll do, and I'll start right now!" He got to his feet and started off along one of the old cow paths in the Old Pasture. ## Realizing the Ideal

By Lucy Lowell

"I'm continually on the lips of many, this phrase, 'to realize the ideal.' The ideal—a goal seen from afar, a thing longed for, dreamed of and seldom attained. To realize it—make it so real that it may be grasped and brought as a tangible, living force into every day experience—this is what realizing it means."

By the Associated Press.
GENEVA, June 21.—The Executive Committee of the Tripartite Naval Conference, under the presidency of Hugh S. Gibson of the United States, decided today to convene a meeting of the technical experts of Great Britain, the United States and Japan.

The experts were instructed first, to exchange views and reach an agreement on the existing status of the three navies, including building programs; and second, to begin a study of the three sets of proposals placed before the conference yesterday, with a view to clarification of their real purport.

An official communiqué was issued saying the executive committee had adopted a resolution in which it suggested that a technical committee be formed to "exchange agreed statistics of the present cruiser, destroyer and submarine tonnage" of each of the three powers and of the design tonnage of ships of those classes comprised in the naval program now authorized and for which money has been appropriated; and "any other information tending to clarify the proposals."

Agreed Basis of Fact.

Japan considers the present conference an entirely new assembly and not a mere continuation of the Washington conference, the navy experts of her delegation made clear today, after a preliminary study of the American and British proposals.

They intimated that they would insist upon a detailed examination of what the various national requirements in auxiliary craft might be without the more or less rigid extension of the 5-5-3 ratio auxiliaries which they construe the American plan to mean.

To Reject British Plan.
They dismiss the British proposals for limitation of the size of capital ships as out of the question for settlement at the present conference, remarking that the Washington signatories are due to revise their conclusions in this respect. They agree, however, that such useful discussion of limitations may be held here with out the adoption of hard and fast decisions.

Admiral Saito, head of the delegation, has a free hand to negotiate, the experts made it known and is not bound to refer to London for fresh instructions. The Japanese believe the American plan would stick even more closely to the principles adopted in 1921 at Washington.

U. S. and Japanese Plan.
As for the Japanese recommendation, the Americans after a cursory examination, believed it would seriously interfere with American freedom in naval construction.

The British proposals, it was stated, would be difficult of acceptance, the Americans having faith in the wisdom of decreasing the size of battleships and cruisers about decreasing the size of cruisers, which was fixed at the Washington conference with the participating Powers concurring after the special needs of American national safety were duly considered.

Examination by the American of the British and Japanese proposals shows that the Japanese plan is within closer range of possible discussion than the British proposals, which are regarded as nothing less than scrapping the Washington treaty and as so vague concerning total tonnage limitations as to constitute no real limitation whatever except as to the
